Science report Hunt ban might endanger the hare

By Hugh Clayton

The startled have that loped away into the growing corn was once a common sight for the urban motorist who passed through the countryside at this time of year. The animal is glimpsed less often now, but the argument about the reasons for its decline continue.

The argument has even crept into the electon campaign, and surfaces briefly in the efforts of the General Election Coordinating Committee for Animal Protection to persuade parties to promise to perseade parties to promise to ban hunting and vivisection. The committee says: "Thousands of hares are killed by packs of hounds in beagling, hare hunting and hare coursing. Apart from the cruelty involved, these practices impose a serious threat to a species which faces extinction."

But new research from the Game Conservancy suggests that hunting is the least important threat to hares, and that a ban on hunting might reduce their chances of survival farther.

The conservancy admits that after three years' research it has not found a complete answer to the hare's decline. But it is convinced that changes in farming methods threaten the animal more than hunting. It also discovered that hares are an important in-gredient in the diet of foxes.

Dr Stephen Tapper and Dr Richard Barnes, in an conservancy research paper, calculate that an "average fox family" will need almost 100lb of meat a month is the late winter before breeding. It defines the family as a dog fox, a vixen and one non-breeding adult, which produces a litter of five cube in April and encoessfully cubs in April and successfully rears three of them to weaning.

The family will need almost 200lb of meat a mouth when the young are hunting in the summer. Conservancy work on fox diets in Hampshire indicates that more that 40lb of the foxes' han would consist of hare. If foxes were hunted less, more would survive to eat

"Shooting and coursing take place when hare populations are high enough to withstand some mortality", Dr Tapper and Dr Barnes write. "In the case of beagles, so few hares are actually killed that losses to the hare population are negligible." Their work on tracking hares with radio transmitters suggests that some modern farming methods are hostile to the animals. Hares like a patchwork pattern of farming which mixes corn, grazing and vegetables, and they like

Architects to study the effects of nuclear war

The Royal Institute of British Architects is to investigate the effects of nuclear war on buildings and the value of civil defence, after a unanimous decision by a meeting of its governing council. There has been strong lobbying by an internal pressure group called Architects for Peace, which wants the profession to refuse to design nuclear shelters. Mr Michael Manser, president-elect of the institute, said that any investigation of the value of shelters would need to cover nuclear weapon delivery systems and the time available to the British Population between warning of an attack and impact. you only have four minutes' warning, unless you put your bed in the shelter and never get out of it, you are not going to have much chance", Mr Manser said. Mr Owen Luder, the president, said: "My instinctive reaction is that four minutes is not enough.

Mr Luder added at a press conference at the institute's London headquarters that its investigation would be based on the study of the effects of nuclear war which the British Medical Association published in March. The institute's council would choose the members of a working party and decide

Mr Smyth, whose eager volunteers have struggled with little official help to save a small morsel of London from dereliction, agrees. But he is worried that so far as inner cities are concerned, the British response to the strategy looks more like a set of ideals than a challenging programme for governments The British strategy report on cities reflects a philosophy which rejects further outward expansion and use of such resources as land and building materials for new development

The city of the strategy makes better use of what it already has. There is thus room for conflict between the aims of the strategy report and the demands in existing cities for immediate accommodation for homeless families and for as fast an increase as possible in jobs. The strategy report goes on to suggest that savings in resources by individuals will be limited "unless there is a much stronger example set by other more powerful groups in society".

COMMENT

This is the point in the campaign at which nerves become frayed and it becomes all the more important to distinguish between legitimate and irresponsible tactics. Mr Denis Healey launched a counter-attack yesterday on behalf of he Labour Party that was a singluar mixture of panache and desperation. It was understandable that he should attempt to sur up alarm at what might be done by a second Thatcher government and it was reasonable that he should seek to take advantage of the Conservative failure to be more forthcoming on their intentions for public spending. But a number of Mr Healey's accu-sations were electioneering of the most brazen kind.

If the Conservatives were returned to office, he alleged, unemployment would continue to rise and that would require either an increase in taxation or further cuts in public spending. That is the kind of unfavour able economic outcome that politicians often say would be the consequence of their opponents; policies. One should not be too squeamish about such a generalized charge. But Mr Healey went on to specify a numbe of particular economies that he believed a future Conservative government

"They will", he said, "stop increasing old age pensions in line with the cost of living". But the Conservatives have specifically committed themselves to raise "retirement pensions and other linked long-term benefits in step with prices. It was a promise that Mrs Margaret Thatcher made in 1979 and later came to regret. She may regret it again this time. But she kept the promise in the last Parliament, and before assuming that she will break it in the next one Mr Healey needs to offer stronger evidence than a proposal for deindexing in the Think Tank report that the Cabinet formally refused to consider last September.

No change in NHS Financing

according to Mr Healey, "set to dismantle large parts of the National Health Service and hand them over to the private sector". More precisely, be went on to say that "they plan to force all families in the longer run into private health insurance". That allegation too is based on the Think Tank report. Yet ministers have denied in the course of th's campaign that there would be any basic change in the method of financing the health

On the basis of speeches by Sir Keith Joseph and Sir Geoffrey Howe, Mr Healey forecast that the Conservatives would introduce a system of school vouchers and replace students grants with loans. There is more justification for that prediction in the sense that it is based on the known preferences of influen-tial Cabinet ministers. But the advocates of those proposals were defeated in the Conservative policy discussions that preceded the drafting of the manifesto. That is not a guarantee that such ideas would not be implemented by a second Thatcher government. But it is clear that they would meet strong resistance in the Cabinet and the party, as well as in the Civil Service.

To some extent the Conservatives have exposed themselves to Mr Healey's allegations by the vagueness of their own proposals in a number of fields. Mr Nigel Lawson's response to persistent questioning at yesterday's news conference on Conservative plans for further privatization in the energy industries was a sustained exercise in uncharacteristic reticence.

Over the past year a number of ministers have made speeches pointing to some privatization of welfare services. The signs are that Con-servative thinking in that field has not progressed from ministerial inclinations to the development of acceptable proposals. But that has to be deduced more from significant silences than informative statements. Most important of all, the Conservatives have been far too coy about their approach to public expenditure in the lifetime of the next Parliament. Parliament.

Even the defending Conservative, Mr Andrew Bowden, has a certain fascination with the politics of his opponents in Brighton, Kemptown. He holds the view, of which he may not like to be reminded in five years, that it is good for the country if the Conservatives country if the lose the occasional election, say every 12 or 15 years. He hopes for a thumping

Tory victory on June 9, with a bigger majority than he had against the moderate Labour man last time, just to prove that the Militant Tendency spells electoral disaster for Labour. Far from wanting to "squeeze" the SDP, in convento tional fashion, he more or less openly wishes them well, on the broadminded basis that a regrouping of the left is necessary for the health of British democracy. For Kemptown is Militant territory, though their ascendancy is not unchallenged. The weight of Militant support won the Labour nomination for Mr Rod Fitch, but by just one vote from his brother, the non-Militant Brian. Kemptown constituency party's reward for this choice is measured by the coachload, as organized extra canvassers pour in to reinforce Labour's native and already formidable army.

If the SDP finds itself squeezed, it may be between two such personal followings, record is also said to be worth a handsome bonus. The Conservatives have, however, encountered the first signs of reisistance to the prospect of a "Thatcher land-slide", among potential vote-switchers of general Tory sympathies who are becoming alarmed by the message of the opinion polls. Such sophisti-cated calculations merely con-prospect was the other way. The battle over issues is being fought from the Labour side with much angry left-wing language directed at all that is symbolized by the word "Thatcher". The target will not quite stand still, however, as Mr Bowden is a somewhat un-Thatcherish Tory who has voted against the Government more than once, in particular in favour of his favourite cause, old-age pensioners, who are numerous in the constitency.

Peterborough has an execulent train service from London, which makes it a favourite place for senior politicians of all parties to drop in for a couple of hours' flesh pressing on the way north. They naturally gravitate to the palatial new shopping precinct, where the repertoire of piped music includes Wagner's iegfried Idyll.

Moscow laments destruction of détente

The Soviet Union reacted swiftly to the Williamsburg declaration on arms control yesterday, saying that the West's determination to deploy cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe if the Geneva talks failed showed that detente had been obliterated once and for Adopting a tone of sorrow rather than anger, Moscow said that the declaration was made up of "the usual set of phrases" and showed "no sign of a shift in the direction of realism".

Commentaries distributed by Tass said that the United States, having failed to reach an economic consensus at Williamsburg, had made sure of imposing its will on Western Europe in the military field. That meant going ahead with the deployment of new Nato missiles in Europe by the end of the year at all costs.

visit by the Pope

Finance ministers of the seven Western industrialized nations have agreed at the Williamsburg summit to reconsider the Polish debt after the Pope's visit there next month, Bailey Morris writes.

Any initiative will be based on moves by the Polish Government to introduce reforms and relax martial law. Poland has been in arrears on a debt estimated at $20,000m (£12,300m), owed largely to European banks.

The United States and West European countries introduced curbs on economic relations with Poland after the 1981 military crackdown.

The declaration was described by Mr George Shultz, the American Secretary of State, as evidence of Western unity and firmness. Tass claimed, however, that there had been serious differences behind the scenes, and that the United States had only been able to impose its view after a delay.

Tass said the warning issued by the Soviet Government last Satuday had obviously had an effect on America's West European allies.

The warning, published in Pravda, said that if cruise and Pershing 2 missiles were deployed as planned, the Soviet Union would respond by stationing missiles of its own "in arrangement with other Warsaw Pact countries", and would threaten the territory of the United States directly.

The West Europeans at Williamsburg had evidently thought it politically inadvis-Debt decision awaits

The Russians are none the less dismayed by the tough and unanimous Western stand at Williamsburg, coming as it did only hours after Moscow had warned the West "with the utmost clarity" not to go ahead with the deployment of cruise and Pershing.

Tass also regretted that the Williamsburg summit had re-fused "categorically" to include the British and French deterrents in the Geneva negotiations.

The losses of nationalized industries are costing the taxpayer billions of pounds.

Yet the Labour party have pledged a sweeping programme of nationalization if they win the next election.

Not only will efficient industries like electronics, pharmaceuticals and construction be under attack. Privatisation will be ended and council trading activities will be encouraged. Where will the money come from for this? The answer is from the taxpayer and the Wei Ting-chao, editor of a banned political magazine Formosa, is serving six years in prison for "inciting a group of persons to com threaten violence". He was arrested in Dec yesterday. The testimony was given by Squadron Leader John Neube, a leading prosecution witness. He was being cross-examined by Mr Harry Ognall, QC, appearing for six Air Force officers charged with aiding the sabotage at Thornhill arr base last July 25.

The witness also agreed with Mr Ognall's suggestion that Wing Commander John Cox, one of the accused, who was in charge of the Air Force regi-ment, had made active efforts in the year before the sabotage to improve security and the training of security personnel. In his evidence, Squadron Leader Ncube, the officer commanding 202 Squadron at Thornfrill, said he had been concerned about a reduction in available security manpower as individuals were frequently being sent on courses. The six officers appeared in court yesterday in civilian dress, in spite of a regulation published in Friday's government

Gazette requiring prisoners to wear prison uniform. The new regulation also prohibits the wearing of security forces uniforms by accused. When the officers first appeared in court on May 23 they wore Air Force uniforms but were later forced to change into civilian suits. Yesterday's session was adjourned early to enable the Ministry of Defence to produce Air Force documents which have so far been withheld from the defence.

Dior's curved New Look, sculpted as white jacket with black skirt, points up the contrast with the angular austerity suits. The twentieth century dress keeper. Valerie Mendes, sees the same contrast between the "softness of the 1970s" and the hard-edged preceding decade. Indeed there is nothing more extraordinary in the exhibition than the encapsulated 1960s. There, bent back at an odd angle (and looking like creatures from another planet) are five figures: Yves Saint Laurent's Mondrian dress sliced into squares, Mary Quant's quintessen-tial mini shift, Pierre Cardin's space age splash of scarlet, Ungaro's skinny slither of lime green with blue, and a Courrèges' youthquake dress in pure white with a midriff frieze of daisies.

John Barry reveals the secrets of the superpower talks on European nuclear missiles

Geneva behind closed doors

The United States and the Soviet Union have been negotiating over the stationing of cruise and Pershing missiles in Europe since November 1981. They are stalemated. This series discloses the reasons why omrade Nitze, I will tell you a story." It was the morning of Dec-ember 1, 1981, the first working session of the superpower negotiations to limit, perhaps even abolish, a new generation of nuclear weapons in Europe. The Soviet and American delegations faced each other down length of the polished table in the penthouse of the United States mission in Geneva. Through the wide windows, the wintry sunlight gleamed on the lake and, beyond, the breath-catching view of Mont Blanc. At the centre of the table, the head of the Soviet team, Yuli Kvitsinsky, had decided to open proceedings by telling his American counterpart, Paul Nitze, a Russian joke.

"A bear was travelling on a train one day. And he noticed, hopping along the corridor outside his compartment, a rabbit. The rabbit was looking very worried. So the bear said: 'What's the matter, rabbit?"

I am sure the inspector is coming," said the rabbit. But I don't have a 'Never mind,' said the bear. 'Climb on to this seat next to me, and I'll protect you."

The rabbit looked dubious; but he finally decided to accept the bear's offer, so he hopped on to the seat and settled down. But not for long. . . . "

As they listened to the story, the American delegation mentally recalled what they knew of the personalities behind the Slav faces staring across at them. There was General Yuri Lebe-surprise him - but the apparent day, the representative of the Soviet assumption that the United States' General Staff: the technical expert, one of only two or three on the Soviet team who knew the real figures about their weapons production and performance. Foreign Ministry: the diplomat who knew how to probe, with exquisite politeness, for cracks between the United States and its European allies. in the next seat, another Foreign Ministry man, Valeri Popov: a wizard with words, the man who would draft virtually all the Soviet documents presented in the talks. And then the "advisers and experts", two of them the inevitable KGB men: Paylichenko, masquerading as the representative of the Soviet Academy of Sciences; and 2rdashev, notionally from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. And leading the whole team, a new face in the small world of Soviet arms negotiators, at 45 a mere youth by Soviet standards, the protegé of Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko himself: Yuli Kvitsinsky. Telling a joke. . . .

But soon they heard the inspector coming down the corridor, and the rabbit got worried again. So the bear said: 'I will tell you what we can do. I will hold you by your ears out of the carriage window, so the inspector cannot see you. Then, when he has gone. you can come in again."

"The rabbit, by now really worried agreed. So the bear picked him up by the ears" - and Kvitsinsky clenched his right fist - "and dangled him out of the window.

"In came the inspector, and with his other hand the bear showed him his ticket. But the inspector was suspicious. What have you got in that hand outside the window? he asked.

'Why,' said the bear" - and here Kvitsinsky suddenly unclenched his fist and showed his empty palm — "Nothing.' "Kvitsinsky smiled.
Across the table. Paul Nitze was surprised. A few minutes earlier, at the photo session for the world's press, all had been cordial. Handshakes, smiles, banter. Now, behind closed doors, the Russians were at once spelling out the Intermediate Nuclear Forces nego-Kvitsinsky's "joke" - was that great powers abandon weaker allies when it Kvitsinsky seemed to be saying, was how rapidly the United States would not ultimately matter. realize that superpower relations demanded it abandon its commitment Soviet perception means this. a score of informal encounters, from discreet lunch and dinner parties for two to a cheerily alcoholic boat trip round Lake Geneva by the massed delegations.

On the surface, the Geneva talks have witnessed great activity. It is an illusion. On the core issues, Geneva has made little progress. Serious negotiation between the Soviet Union brutal reality. The Soviet view of the and the United States have barely begun. And the longer the talks drag tiations - surely the message of on the harder it is to believe there will ever be serious negotiation. For Yuli Kvitsinsky's jolly anecdote accurately suits them. The issue for the Soviets, represents the Soviet position: between superpowers, the fate of allies should In bargaining terms at Geneva, that Between superpowers, the fate of allies should not ultimately matter.

The dominating topic of the Geneva talks has been the SS-20: its numbers, basing and capabilities. But on this central topic, there is stalemate. The Soviet objectives at Geneva are simple. Moscow wants to preserve all its SS-20s. But it wants to eliminate from western Europe not only the prospect of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles, but almost all the existing American long-range nuclear strike aircraft based in Europe too. Since there are now 351 SS-20s deployed, and the Soviets are pershitting on the basis of alleged negotiating on the basis of alleged balance, there are no small objectives. To see how their proposals at Geneva are designed to preserve their missiles, it is time to reveal the secrets of the SS-the length of the trans-Siberian railway. The missiles were so beavy, and the distances so great, that rail flat-cars were the only way of getting the rockets to their launch-sites.

The Russians are creatures of habit and geography. A quarter of a century later, most of the SS-20 bases are to be found not too far from the same trans-

Siberian tracks.
When the Soviets tabled at Geneva their draft treaty in May last year, at the start of the second round of talks, they proposed limiting nuclear missiles and aircraft within "Europe". And they defined the eastern boundary of Europe as being the line of longitude 60 degrees east (At the same time, they said the boundary ran along the crest of the Ural mountains, which is not quite the same as 60 degrees; the confusion has not so far been cleared up.) Inside "Europe", west of that 60 degree line, there are 22 SS-20 squadrons deployed: 198 launchers, Five of their base-complexes can be identified. They are at Yedrovo not round Sverdlovsk, Pervomaysk, north of the Black Sea; and at a site in the bleak desert east of the Caspian.

The Verkhnyaya Salda location probably explains why the Soviet definition of the eastern boundary of Europe, as presented at Geneva, is ambiguous. The site is just to the east of the 60 degree line, but might scrape into Europe if the hazier boundary of the Urals is taken instead. The Pervomaysk site is the newest location among the five. Until a year or so ago. Pervomaysk was one of two Soviet missile fields which together housed about 120 SS-11 intercontinental missiles targeted on Europe. As the SS-20s roll off the production line, and take over this role from the SS-11, the Pervomaysk silos have been aban-doned and SS-20 launchers have apparently been moved in instead.

The Soviets have three SS-20 basecomplexes deep in Siberia and the Soviet Far East. They are at Novosibirsk, and at two sites east of Lake Baikal, Drobyanaya and Olovyannaya, Currently, 12 squadrons are housed at those sites; and there is evidence that more will soon arrive at Novosibirsk. From the Lake Baikal locations, the SS-20s could, on some estimates of their range, hit Manila in the Philippines. And it is presumably those squadrons which are targeted on Japan - a fact that explains the keen interest Tokyo is taking in the Geneva talks.
But, it was the question of what targets the SS-20s could hit from the Novosibirsk site which produced one of the more revealing remarks at Geneva. Acknowledging withdrawn east of the 60 degree line. the SS-20s would still have the range to strike western Europe, the Soviets have proposed pulling them back further east still, behind the 80 degree line. In return, they demand not merely that almost all American longer-range nuclear weapons be withdrawn from Europe, but also that American aircraft-carriers with nuclear-capable aircraft aboard should be banned from the Mediterranean and the eastern Atlantic.

In reality, regional limits of the sort the Soviets propose are impractical, because the SS-20 is so mobile. In a cirsis, what is to prevent Moscow from moving its SS-20s westward once more? But, to explore the proposal, the American team plotted the reach of the SS-20 from its Novosibirsk site which, being just east of the 80 degree line, would not be dismantled. There is dispute in Washington over the SS-20's maximum potential range. highway: Yur'ya; just north-west of the town of Kirov; Verkhnyaya Salda, which is part of the industrial complex latter figure seems to envisage very latter figure seems to envisage very considerable future development of the SS-20; and it is unclear what weight of warhead the DIA thinks the SS-20 could ever carry that far, and with what accuracy. For bargaining purposes at Geneva, however, the United States has adopted this higher figure. Even on the CIA's lower estimate, though the SS-20s at Novosibirsk could hit targets on Nato's flanks in Norway and Turkey.

When Nitze pointed this out, Kvitsinsky made two responses. His considered reply was that the SS-20's true range was little more than 2,500 miles - which is, in fact, as far as it has ever been test-fired. With that range, he said, the SS-20s at Novosibirsk could hit no part of Nato. (Though, as our map shows, that still seems to be incorrect.)

But it was Kvitsinsky's first response to Nitze's challenge which arrested those who heard it. He listened to Nitze explaining why, in the United States view, targets in Norway were still at risk. Then he shrugged. "So why should you worry", he said, "if we kill a few reindeer?

WHY A PATEK PHILIPPE IS THE COSTLIEST WATCH TO PRODUCE AND ONE OF THE FINEST INVESTMENTS YOU CAN OWN.

It takes nine months to complete the Golden Ellipse shown here. Sometimes even several years for a complicated Patek Philippe model. And once the watch is finally assembled and working perfectly, it is taken apart again to be further refined.

Every element is microscopically handfinished to a tolerance which represents a fraction of the thickness of a human hair. Every wheel, gear, pinion and cog is polished by hand until it is virtually frictionless.

Just as most Patek Philippes are handed down from one generation to the next, so are the tools that Patek Philippe watchmakers use to perfect them – heirlooms that have become as precious as they are indispensable.

After 600 hours of testing, regulating and refining to as near absolute perfection as human hands and minds can achieve, each watch is lubricated so delicately that it takes less than a cupful of oil for an entire year's production.

Everything about a gold Patek Philippe that can be gold, is gold – 18 kt. gold – right down to the dial, the winding crown, the strap buckle, and the spring bars that hold the strap to the watch. In automatic Patek Philippes, even the winding rotors are of solid gold, since the additional weight increases the winding efficiency.

But gold has never represented more than 25% of the cost of a Patek Philippe watch. The real cost is in the time, patience, tradition and absolute dedication to flawlessness that makes it a Patek Philippe.

Like any other work of art by an acknowledged master, a Patek Philippe appreciates in value because the scarcity of such quality is growing at a disheartening rate.

Queen Victoria, Tchaikowsky, Roosevelt, Lindbergh ... but a few of the famous who have worn a Patek Philippe. Others wear one this very minute, and constitute a long and impressive roll-of-honour.

Patek Philippe is possibly the only watch manufacturer ever to have a comprehensive book devoted exclusively to it. This volume retraces Patek Philippe's history since 1839 and describes with 600 illustrations many of its rare timepieces.

It includes Patek Philippe watch No. 27.368, the first Swiss wristwatch ever made. It was sold in 1868 – for a comparatively modest sum – to the Countess Kocevicz of Hungary. Today the value of this watch is estimated at $50.000. Or watch No. 761.478 – one of the earlier Patek Philippe self-winding models – sold in 1955 for $475. We bought it back last year, at an auction, for almost five times its initial value which, when you think of it, makes one wonder:

Can you afford to invest in anything less than a Patek Philippe?

Did Dmitri Shostakovich have music on the brain? An extraordinary article by a Chinese neurosurgeon in next month's Musical Times suggests that he had a piece of shell shrapnel lodged deep inside his brain, and that as a result each time he leaned his head to the side he heard musical melodies - different each time - which he could use when composing. Moving his head back level immediately stopped the music. Dr Dajue Wang claims to have had the story from the Soviet neurosurgeon whom Shostakovich consulted, and whose X-rays allegedly located the musical fragment in the temporal horn of the left ventricle. Shostakovich was in Leningrad during the siege, but there has previously been no mention of any injury. Dr. Ronald Henson, a British neurologist consulted about Wang's story, says cautiously; "I would hesitate to affirm that it could

Labour would be looking for a dramatic improvement in the balance of payments if they were in charge of the show. Melvyn Brage, at yesterday's press conference, told how the Arts Council backed the first production of Look Back in Anger at the Royal Court with $4.000. "Since then", he said, "over form in royalities has come back to £9m in royalties has come back to this country from that play being performed around the world." One reason, perhaps, why in her quango-hunts thus far Margaret Thatcher has not had the Arts Council in her

He became famous after the general election in 1945, when Labour had a majority of 146, for saying: "We are the masters now." What he actually said, because politicians are seldom so pithy, was: "We are the masters at the moment, and not only at the moment, but for a very long time to come." It was in the same period when Aneurin Bevan said the Tories were "lower than vermin" were "lower than vermin" and Emanuel Shinwell declared: "The organized workers are our friends . as for the rest, they don't matter tinker's cuss." Emperor Nyerere, King Obote

The chances of building a prosper-ous Uganda have been blighted by President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, working in close cooperation with Milton Obote, the President of Uganda. Nyerere's ambition for political domination of the entire East and Central African region is well known. To achieve this he has a special strategy. From time to time he has inflicted damage upon a neighbour's economy, as when he closed his border with Kenya more than four years ago. And if neither Nyerere nor Obote actually hatched the August 1982 coup plot in Kenya, they certainly hoped it would succeed

Both Nyerere and Obote have always looked enviously at Kenya, whose well-being depends in no small measure on neighbourly, mutually beneficial relations with Uganda. It is a matter for regret, however, that there is no sign of such a relationship so long as Nyerere remains the senior partner of the Nyerere/Obote axis.

Nyerere's own socialist colossus is now crumbling around him, exposing all the weaknesses and wickednesses of the Tanzanian system. Out of sheer panic he has closed all borders with his neighbours, and arrested thousands of Africans and several hundred Tanzanians of Asian origin, on the pretext that they are responsible for bringing his economy to grief. He accuses them of magendo (smuggling). I know of a Kikuyu hotelier in Tanzania re-cently arrested for hoarding because three bags of sugar were found on his hotel premises.

In pursuit of his mirage of socialism, Nyerere has forced unwilling peasants into collective ujamaa villages where there is no incentive of any description. The total effect has ground the economy to a halt. The man in the street describes this system as Mali ya Uma, which means that all money and property belong to the public. Why should one have to work? Let the government that put all money and property into the hands of the public provide for everybody.

Mwalimu - the Teacher - as Nyerere is known to his humble subjects, has turned his country into one vast kindergarten, where he carries out whatever social and economic experiments attract his fancy. Whether the idea of ujamaa has any merit or not, Nyerere always gets himself off the book by his readiness to admit in public that his government has failed. But it is little short of amazing that the West continues pouring money into Nyerere's coffers. Tanzania is Africa's greatest per capita recipient

The socialism that has flowed from Nyerere's Arusha Declaration of 1967 has resulted only in the nationalization of poverty. The main source of employment is the three public services: the ordinary civil service, the civil service of the party and the public corporations. This gives the President a vast reservoir of patronage. Virtually all worthwhile jobs flow from him. He also has an elaborate intelligence network with its attendant instruments of torture. Human rights are regularly violated. Nyerere is no

Milton Obote was the only Ugandan Nyerere trusted to make Uganda socialist on the Tanzanian model. He was the author of the Common Man's Charter, supposedly an improved version of Nyerere's own Arusha Declaration. Although Obote is not at present implementing all the provisions of the Charter because of political expediency, he has not renounced it. It is only a question of time before chilling provisions are unleashed on Ugandans.
The elaborate machinery of the Ugandan police state has been resurrected, the instruments of torture put in place, all available former agents of the hated General Service, the equivalent of the KGB, have again been recruited. It chills the soul to note that Britain, with its team of military advisers, is assisting Obote in the training of his agents of torture. The West keeps Obote's economy allost.

The two administrations that followed the downfall of Idi Amin were led by Professor Yusuf Lule and myself, During my 11 months in office, the legislative body decided to alter the provisions of the president. Instead of allowing the ruling party to produce him as a conjuror produces a bird out of his hat, the president would have had to be elected by universal adult suffrage. This change could not be tolerated by Nyerere and Obote.

The Council through which I governed further decided that the first general election after the defeat of Amin would be held under the umbrella of the National Liberation Front and not under the old political parties. Our aim was to promote unity and avoid tribal or religious factionalism. Further, there was to be no limit to the number of candidates for the presidency or for membership of parliament.

Nverere and Obote decided to remove me from office before the election. I was detained under house arrest in Entebbe and for eight months was guarded by about 80 Tanzanian soldiers - part of the force sent in to oust Amin - before I managed to flee the country and find refuge in Britain. The Military Commission which removed me. tried to frame me with charges of corruption, although no steps were taken to substantiate the allegations. Nyerere had resented my acting as president of an independent sovereign state and not as a regional commissioner of a Tanzanian region, which Uganda became after Amin's defeat,

I understand that Nyerere has agreed to send another 10,000 Tanzanian troops to launch a final ssault on the patriotic forces now fighting to liberate Uganda, perhaps on condition that Obote agrees to a merger with Tanzania on the model of Zanzibar's union with mainland Tananyika in 1964. At the end of the day Nyerere hopes to emerge as the undisputed, absolute Emperor of East Africa with Obote as one of his

Wearing down the runaway horse

Will this past weekend be looked back on as the point when the election cam-paign of 1983 took a decisive turn? Until now, the campaign has had many of the attributes of a one-horse race. This is not because the issues are of no intrinsic interest. It is simply that as elections become more and more dominated by opinion polls, the issues behind the polls are less and less discussed

In the first election of 1974 this worked well enough for the Liberal Party. In the penultimate weekend of that campaign, the opinion polls started to show a rise in Liberal support. From then on the polls became the election issue. Daily press conferences were simply a running commentary on the rise in the Liberal poll. There was neither inclination, nor need, to talk about anything else. The polls rather than the politicians fought the campaign.

In this election there have been more poils than ever. But for the most part they have shown a boring consistency or magnificent stability. depending on your political point of view. In the 1979 election campaign, the Liberal polls stayed flat at around 7 to 8 per cent until the middle of the last full week. They then doubled to 14 per cent.

Was this past weekend the point at which take-off for the Alliance began? Let us first look at such evidence as there is from sources other than the polls.

It is generally agreed that Labour has just had the worst week's campaigning that any party has suffered in any election. Everything went wrong. The defence compromise came riotously unstuck. The Militant issue surfaced all over again. And Mr. Foot's every appearance served only to heighten the image of a beleaguered and beaten leader. Reports from the front have indicated that even Labour's bedindicated that even Labour's bedrock vote is weakening.

On the Conservative side, Mrs Thatcher began to reveal tell-tale signs of megalomania. The press conference at which she gave her reasons for wanting a landslide majority was an astonishing affair. Nobody expects undue modesty from political leaders but her assertion that she needs a massive majority in order to take over the personal leadership of the western world was not only ludicrous but just a little sinister. Perhaps she had had a bad night. If not, then last week must go down as the week when Bossy Boots became too big

The Alliance started to detect definite signs of a campaign lift-off. Reports from the constituencies were very good, and all the leaders experienced increased interest and enthusiasm at their meetings and walkabouts. Perhaps more important, the Conservative campaign managers started to get edgy about the Alliance's performance. It was reported that Mr Cecil Parkinson, the chairman of the Conservative Party, was going to get Mr David Steel. One senior, but nameless, Tory campaign manager was re-ported as wishing that the Labour vote would go up a bit to fend off the Alliance challenge.

So what did the poils make of all this? Three of the four polls published this weekend showed an increase in Alliance support. The fourth showed support remaining fourth showed support remaining steady. The average rating of these four polls rose from 18 per cent to 20 per cent. However, a more significant poll was carried out by Harris for London Weekend Television's Weekend World programme. This was conducted in 20 cents where Liberton conducted in 20 cents first and the state of the conducted in 20 cents first and the state of the cents seats where Liberals came first or second last time. In this poll, the Alliance vote rose from 28 per cent last week to 36 per cent this week. Such an improvement is far more than a statistical blip. It indicates that reports from the constituencies are not wrong.

It is now entirely possible that on polling day, the Alliance can overtake Labour in votes. What that will do in terms of seats is anyone's guess. If, however, by next weekend the Alliance has moved into second place in the opinion polls, Mrs Thatcher's runaway horse may start to look a little lame

On further reflection, however, we can see that the belief in democratic election, as the sole ground of legitimate government, can lead precisely to this paradoxical postion. The paradox issues from two premises. First, good government is limited government. Second, both government and the force that limits t should be democratically elected. Hence the power of the government must be limited in the Commons, by pressures exerted through the elected began to contract significantly, and in the seventies it dwindled even further. He had his dacha (country house) in the foreign ministry complex outside Moscow, and from spring to late autumn would spend most of his time there, working on a small garden with flower beds and a vegetable patch. His daughter, also called Melinda often stayed with him. Donald was particularly fond of his little granddaughter, who sometimes stayed at the dacha for a whole summer,

But gradually Maclean's family drifted apart. First his elder son Fergus, trained in Russia as a mathematician, left for England. He came back once or twice to visit his father. Then Donald's wife Melinda left for America, and so did his daughter (with her second husband). Maclean felt the parting with his granddaughter especially keenly. Finally, his younger son, also called Donald, left. Maclean was comoletely alone. When he learned that he was seriously ill, he withdrew into himself and practically stopped seeing even his closest friends. I did not see him for several years and heard of his death only when I read the announcement in Investiva Maclean was one of the most effective secret agents in Russian history. It is therefore not so surprising that Izvestiya should have described him in its obituary notice as a man of "high moral qualities, who for all his conscious life was devoted to the high ideals of Soviet progress, humanism, peace and iternational cooperation". C Times Newspapers Limited, 1983 Many ardent believers in democracy representatives of the people.

The conclusion follows; but only one of the premises is true. It is true that good government is limited government. But it is not true that limitation ought to be exerted only in the Commons. For a variety of reasons, we tend to exaggerate both the power and the prestige of the extent to which it feeds off other institutions, without whose cooperation it could not function as a representative chamber. It matters very much that a great many of its members are ignorant, unintelligent and personally ambitious. It matters too that they are no longer drawn from a class which feels no need to use the Commons for the purposes of social gain. But these things while deplorable in themselves would matter far more were the House not subject to limiting pressures from institutions that are more civilized than itself. Two such institutions are particularly important for our future. Both have legislative powers, both have dignities which support those powers, and which save them from the appearance of arbitrariness; and both have a representative function. One is the House of Lords, the other is the Judiciary. Neither has elected members, and their power depends precisely on that. Causes that cannot be heard in the vulgar hubbub of the Commons may yet be heard in the Upper House Individual grievances, which the careerist politician has only half an ear, can be heard in court, and may find redress through a judicial process responsive to the call of natural justice. Common law judges, armed with the rules of equity, are also legislators. When statutes, hasily drafted and mind-lessly applied, have driven the individual into a corner, he may yet call for judicial aid. The resulting udgment - as Lord Denning has most vividly illustrated - is more likely to remedy his grevance than any acts of the ignorant politicians

The Commons has, in recent years, shown itself jealous of all rival modes of representation. We therecertainly be dangerous for the cause of limited government. The Labour Party seeks to abolish the House o Lords: and meanwhile it would surely do all in its power to remove its legislative powers. Moreover, the party has shown itself disposed belligerently to question judicial decisions whenever its legislative intentions are thwarted by the operations of natural justice. How much more likely is this to be true when the party is increasingly influenced by people for whom judicial independence is a merely bourgeois" ideal, to be overthrown in the interests of a more "democratic" social order.

The present government has been willing to listen both to the Lords and to the judges. On several occasions it has introduced legislation which has been overturned i the Upper House. It has quietly accepted the result, without threatening to use the iniquitous Parlia ment Acts, which give to the House of Commons powers which match its arrogance. Nor has this government shown the slightest tendency to put pressure on the judiciary, en though ministerial intentions have been thwarted more than once - and to the embarrassment of the minister in question - by the courts.

A landslide victory for the Conservatives in the Commons would therefore not be the antidemocratic disaster that many prophesy, for the very reason that the Conservative Party is, to this degree, anti-democratic. It is prepared to concede legislative and epresentative functions to offices that are not filled by democratic election. It is prepared to recognize that there may be more wisdom in traditional institutions than meets the democratic eye, and that the urgent clamour of the hustings may not be the best or most serious expression of the political temper of the nation.

When he fled to Russia in 1951 after being warned by Kim Philby, Maclean discovered that real Soviet socialism was not at all what he had imagined it to be in the Thirties. At first he lived in the town of Knibyshev, during the final years of the terrible Stalin tyranny. Maclean was decorated with the Order of the Red Banner for his services to the Soviet Union. He could equally well have been shot. In the Thirties dozens of Soviet intelligence agents, diplomats and Comintern agents were summoned to Moscow and executed on Stalin's orders. This was continuing, though on a lesser scale. Yet, however disappointed he became with the reality of Soviet socialism, Maclean did not want to break with the ideas of socialism and communism in general. He did not want to accept the ideas and values of capitalism. He had no regrets about the past, and did not repent of his work for Soviet intelligence. Naturally, when I heard about Maclean and his career I wanted to make his acquaintance and hear his learn English. He also said he wanted to read a number of dissident manuscripts which at that time - with the flowering of Samizdat, or underground literature - were circulating in Moscow.

As far as I know Maclean did not seek out meetings with dissidents, but he did contribute financially to funds for the persecuted. In 1970 two people were arrested, both schoolgirls who had distributed leaflets produced by themselves. One of the girls, Irina Kaplun, was released, but the other, Olga loffe, was put in a psychiatric hospital. Maclean knew the girl's family. That summer there were elections to the Supreme Soviet, in which Maclean was entitled to vote as a Soviet citizen. He went to the polling station, took the voting slip and wrote on it: "As long as girls like Olga Ioffe are put in psychiatric hospitals, I cannot take part in the voting."

Meeting place for the opposition-minded

Maclean was very pleased when his book, British Foreign Policy after Sucz. was published in London under his real name. He began to declare to his friends and acquaintances that he was no longer Mark Petrovich Frazer, but Donald Maclean. Two years later the book came out in Russian in the Soviet Union, and he gave me a copy with a warmly worded inscription.

But did Maclean really have no regrets? He certainly displayed a nostalgia, even a longing for England. He loved everything English, and collected English things. He sometimes received money from England and used it to help his relatives - provided they bought British goods in the foreign currency stores in Moscow.

I met Maclean's wife Melinda on two occasions. Once she gave me a large radio, a gift from the American publisher of my book on Stalin. I was not, of course, privy to the details of Maclean's family life, but I did know that Melinda lived uport from him (in an equally hig flat). I did not know his three children well. but I do know that his sons, once they had become students, brought a new spirit into Maclean's life. POLITICAL GEOLOGY

Landslide is an electoral term Labour movement after every indicating a great majority of electoral defeat, has now turned votes leading to an overwhelming parliamentary victory. According to the Oxford dictionary it was coined in the United States, and used of an election nearly a hundred years ago. The House of Commons has had its share of landslide majorities. Of 27 governments since 1880, eleven have had overall majorities of 100 or more (four over 200), with three over 50. There have been seven hung parliaments. It is significant how seldom a landslide victory is actually repeated by a further working majority. Only the 1859 Unionist majority of 152, and the National government of 1931 (493) managed to achieve a further secure majority at the end of their term. When the political pendulum swings it seems normally to dally halfway with a hung parliament or two, or very small majorities on either side of the line.

Millie down

In purely parliamentary terms, therefore, nothing in our democracy suggests that a landslide leads to an elective dictatorship of the kind being wildly suggested now by some Labour spokesmen and Alliance supporters, all of whom are having. to adjust to the possibility that the Conservative arguments have prevailed with the people.

The Labour Party, after an internal scrabble to mark out positions for the inevitable post to warning potential Tory voters to beware of Mrs Thatcher winning too large a majority. That comes ill from a party whose own manifesto calls for a fundamental and irreversible shift in power, and proposes to make certain of that by abolishing the one remaining check on an overweening Commons majority - the House of Lords. In the circumstances of a substantial Tory majority, Labour spokesmen would be only too thankful for a House of Lords with a standing anti-Conservative total of some 435 crossbench and Opposition peers. They have, incidentally, inflicted some 44 defeats on this government since 1979.

A Tory landslide would not actually mean that the government had any greater ability to pass legislation than it has had with its majority of 43 since 1979. (It is possible, however, that the promised vote on capital punishment would be much closer than hitherto.) There would probably be an initial outbreak of Tory triumphalism, which would be distasteful and unnecessary. The business of politics and traditions of open and continuous argument across the floor of the House of Commons would have to be observed whatever the majority. It was observed by a diminished Tory opposition in 1945. Even during the 1930s when the rump of its former self it continued effectively to maintain the argument.

As a former Chief Whip, Mr ym was correct to foresee that a landslide majority presents any government with problems of parliamentary management and discipline. The Tory wets would probably have more freedom to voice and vote their dissent than anything they have enjoyed since 1979.

What the opposition parties fear is that a major Conservative victory would entitle Mrs Thatcher to interpret that vote as an endorsement for her style of government and her intention to shift the political centre of gravity away from its point fixed since 1945. But a majority would indeed carry that endorsement rather than one whose political limits were specifically encompassed by the bland semantics of the Conservative manifesto. The Prime Minister makes no secret of her intentions. Hitherto they have found expression more in terms of attitudes than of legislation. That is likely to remain the case in another parliament if only because the individualist/collectivist argument is at root much more about an attitude to society than it is about specific administrative, legislative or economic policies. In that sense landslip would be a better term than landslide. Landslide refers to the statistical fact of a vote count; landslip has to do with the mortem which afflicts the Labour party was reduced to a movement of mountains.

TENTACLES OF TAXATION

Election manifestos talk long and loud about spending plans but softly about the taxing to pay for them. None of the three major manifestos tries to place taxation in the central position it should occupy in the social policies for the 1980s. The prospect of economic growth does not match the spending which is promised, or the cutbacks which, if this Government's record is anything to go by, are never really achieved. The likelihood is of a revenue shortfall, and the temptation would be to tinker with the tax machine rather than to remodel.

been bridged by governments cynically sitting back while and corporation tax. But they inflation has ensnared more have suffered from the phobia of citizens in the tax net, or, as in the case of Labour governments, raising the existing rates, tightening the bands of enforcement, and introducing new taxes. But any politician tempted by fiscal novelty should pause, and con-sult a newly published volume Tax Making Policy in the United Kingdom. It shows that in fiscal policy there are no easy answers, and some lamentably unsuccessful ones such as the Selective Employment Tax and Capital Transfer Tax.

The anthors, Professor Cedric Sanford and Dr Ann Robinson. bluntly conclude that the great era of tax reform in the: 1960s and 1970s - the era that gave us VAT and two brands of Corporation Tax - has left a "pretty pitiful result". The lesson is to avoid making commitments to change tax policy on the basis of ill-costed enthusiasm dreamed up in party research departments, which give results like the capital transfer and gains taxes that are both inequitable, inefficient and inhibit the very redistribution they were sup-

Yet there remains a compelling case for tax reform, first in the way tax law comes to be written. Witness Sir Geoffrey Howe, before he became Chancellor of the Exchequer. In an address to the Addington Society in 1977 he proposed radical, paper on the subject. Within the legislation, for more discussions before tax proposals came before Parliament, better use of scrutinizing committees, perhaps a permanent House of Commons taxation committee. Yet once he was installed in the Treasury Sir Geoffrey's enthusiasm cooled. Far reaching changes were made to CTT with minimal consultation. They still fail cuipably short of the outright repeal of CTT, which is what that impen-was explicitly promised by Mrs Thatcher at the despatch box in February 1975. The Government has indeed Normally the revenue gap has published three tax reforming green papers, on family tax, rates fiscal discussion which afflicts Doin Westminster and Whitehall. So the Conservative manifesto ignores those green papers entirely. It hopes for reductions in tax rates: an admirable objective but one which by itself would leave intact the host of anomalies, poverty traps and inequities ensconced in the present system.

Labour rolls out the old notion of a wealth tax. None of the five-year-old deficiencies has been rectified. The revenue it would raise would be minimal; its impact on the distribution of wealth slight. Labour's other programmes are so profligate that they would lead to higher taxation either directly (in spite of what their spokesmen say) or else through creating an excessive inflation which taxes everyone - and the poor worst of all through the back door.

By comparison the Alliance manifesto is detailed and well argued. It proposes tax credits, an old friend of the Conservative Party, and a way of simplifying and aligning the complex overlap between tax and 44 separate means-tested social security benefits. Its aim, apart from securing fiscal efficiency, is to mount an attack on poverty. It is high time this type of proposal was acted on. Ten years have passed since Mr. Heath's green

There is nothing in the proposal about the self-employed; it is not specific about what would hap-pen to some of the less well known means tested benefits: and though it would expose the artificiality of the insurance element in National Insurance, it gives no clue to how much extra cost this would visit on

The European Community is prosperity. It also brought a new EEC aid. To its surprise, the EEC commission found it agreed. The device could solve Greenland's problems without setting a precedent for any other island, such as Corsica - much less Britain - which might be tempted to follow suit. The status only applies to territories which are non-European, are in the early stages of development, and still have umbilical links with the mother country. The difficulties are over fish. The Community, whose hardwon fishing agreement would be put out of kilter, wants to retain the fishing rights of its members in those waters particularly West Germany. Greenland insists on selling these rights and does not see why it should make over its fish as a price for withdrawal. not only the cost of converting the lines to walkways has to be considered but also the annual costs of maintaining them to an acceptable standard. Like many public bodies, Durham County Council finds vandalism a problem. On the railway walks the track surfaces are cut up by scrambling motorcyclists. Stiles, fences and other site fixtures are torn down and destroyed.

Less frustrating, but more expensive, is the cost of discharging the authority's legal obligations. In buying the railway lines from British Rail the council took over many of their obligations. It now finds itself responsible for maintaining about 200 miles of lineside fencing, as well as drains, ditches, culverts, bridges and viaducts.

Most of the permanent structures are over a hundred years old and need extensive maintenance. Some of the large viaducts are listed buildings and the cost of repointing just one of these can run into tens of thousands of pounds.

Unless some way can be found to reduce the costs of this maintenance funds available to local authorities to "buy off" adjoining landowners who press authorities to maintain their vandal-damaged lineside feno-ing – I feel that many authorities will look carefully before taking on these lines for public enjoyment.

Many of us in the state sector of education – possibly sharing with him an Oxbridge background – are striving after the same ideals. Our aim, like his, is for overall standards of excellence for our schools. We are trendy lefties, nor yet social engineers. Rather, we have under-taken the harder task of striving for excellence for all the boys and girls in our communities rather than just for the favoured few.
What a fine education service we should have (as Germany has) if all the supporters of the independent schools, and all parents who care enough to spend thousands a year on their child's education, were, instead, lobbying Parliament through their MPs, lobbying their county councillors and their local community, demanding more re-sources and higher standards for all our comprehensive schools. What social divisions would be healed, and what economic divisions too, between management and labour, would be healed as well.

That is the real educational issue facing our country today. Yours sincerely. DAVID ROONEY. 23 Black Horse Lane, Swavesey, Cambridge May 27.

From Mr Philip Short

Sir. To the beautiful picture of the parish priest as custodian of the secrets of his flock (letters, May 27) it must be added that Parliament saw fit to remove jurisdiction over records of births, deaths, marriages from the Church in 1837; over wills in 1858. These are now accessible to the public without clerical intervention and have been so for many years. To one who comes from a family of Baptists and has seen the snide comments written on the pre-1837 Church records the advantages of this are obvious. Yours faithfully, PHILIP SHORT 123 Church Road, Gateshead 9, Tyne and Wear.

Sir, Brian Crozier's article, "Sur-prise, Russia's secret weapon" (May 23) is an outstanding example of the well-informed blindness that leads quoting from distinguished Russian strategists who consider how to fight and win nuclear wars. But everyone in the business knows perfectly well that influential strategists on both sides consider how to fight and win nuclear wars. In the case of the US. official policy is now to acquire the capability to fight and prevail at every level. What other policy could make sense? Fighting wars happens to be what weapons are made for. There is no point in threatening wars unles you can fight them, or in fighting them unless you can win them. What does Mr Crozier expect strategists to think about when their countries are crammed full of weapons adapted to fighting nuclear wars? Should they think about how to use them to lose wars?

At the same time, same leaders on both sides know that any use of nuclear weapons is insane. It is this schizophrenia that is the problem.

The logic of the arms race, combined with advancing tech-nology, leads directly towards first strike in nuclear-war fighting capa-bility first on one side and then on the other. This would be the end of deterrence. First strike capability on both sides could be quite "balanced" but highly perilous for the whole buman race.

That is why we need a new language of defence and a move towards a credible and effective policy of conventional defensive deterrents.

Sir, As the allegations explanations multiply, circumstances surrounding the sinking of the General Belgrano on Sunday, May 2, 1982 become, if anything, the more inscrutable. They also become more worrying in their wider implications.

Sinking of the

In the Commons on May 12 this year the persistent Mr Tam Dalyeli clicited statements about the time at which the Peruvian peace proposals in front of Mr Francis Pym and Mr Al Haig in Washington became known in London. The Prime Minister stated during questions that the proposals did not reach London until after the attack on the Belgrano. Mr Cranley Onslow said in the adjournment debate that they arrived at 11.15 that Sunday evening.

It is not possible to question these assurances. But the context in which the war cabinet, meeting at Chequers that day, took the decision to sink the Belgrano is another matter. The Foreign Secretary had travelled to Washington post haste only the day before. At some point, certainly, the Belgrano might (as Mrs Thatcher asserts) have presented a real threat. What is questionable is whether the Belgrano, outside the exclusion zone and sailing away from it, presented such a threat in the very short time - a matter of hours - during which Mr Pym's consultations were coming to

The war cabinet seems not to have been concerned to wait upon the outcome of negotiations which whatever their outcome - were extremely unlikely to last until the Belgrano actually become a threat. It is hard to reconcile its decision to sink the Belgrano with Mr Pym's statement in Washington on Saturday, May I (after air and sea attacks on the Falklands) that "No further military action is envisaged. at the moment, except to keep the exclusion zone secure." Whatever it might do later, the Belgrano was no danger to the exclusion zone during the vital bours in which the peace agreement might have been reached. It might be argued that to wait upon the possibility of an agreement might have been to wait for ever. But in this case it would not have been for ever. It could hardly have been more than 24 hours. Are we to suppose that no member of the war cabinet counselled even these few hours of caution while the Conqueror continued to pursue the Belgrano and Mr Pym continued to pursue a settlement? Posterity would honour the moral courage of any who admitted now that some of them did. But posterity would not rate highly either the peaceful intentions, or the foresight, of a war cabinet whose actions ruined the chance of Mr Pym's negotiations succeeding before the progress of his efforts had been

But suppose further - and here the wider implications become frightening indeed - that on another occasion the situation was not that of a relatively small conflict (albeit one to be fought with dreadful new resources of weapons technology) starting in a remote southern ocean, but an impending full-scale nuclear war involving a small country whose nuclear arsenal rendered it a prime, wholly indefensible target?

Suppose that the horror could only be averted by delicate negotiations far away, in the same or some other foreign capital? And that such negotiations were to be conducted by ministers and ambassadors who, for some reason to were not fully and swiftly in conta-and perhaps not in concert - will the intentions of a war cabinet London? Teaching people to put back the clock

Mr Laurie Penman (above) is planning to create a new generation of clock remainers and restorers. He has set up the Teign Valley Training Centre at his bungalow in Trusham, south Devon, and is particularly hoping that disabled people will take advantage of his scheme.

"I can take six people at a time", he said. There are four terms, each running for 13 weeks, with an eight-week break between. "But we are not teaching High Street clock repairs. We deal with antique and high value movements. We hand-make wheels and pinions that will set a seventeenth-century clock ticking again." Mr Penman said he started when a repairer organtly needed a 6in wheel for an antique clock. "I made it, charged him £27, and it went on from there."

He is confident that there is a demand for clock restorers. "Years ago every town in England had craftsmen who concentrated on repairing very old clocks. They could take a 400-year-old clock and make it tick for another 400 years, but their numbers have

The sites, in the Be de France and the River Loire gorges, were occupied by hunters and gatherers during the Magdalenian culture, which began some 19,000 years ago and lasted to the end of the Ice Age.

The most spectacular Magdalenian and piles of making and the most speciacinal magnateman sites known are the painted caves, such as Lascaux, but over the past decade more open habitation sites have been investigated, giving an idea of how many people lived. One of the first such excavations, at Pincevent, has been continued since 1976 by Professor Andre Leroi-Gourhan, who has shown that the site dates from the end of the Magdalenian and was probably not occupied for long. The radiocarbon dates suggest occupation after 10,000 BC, with at least nine

Most of the stone tools are made of local quartz and flint, but chalcedony from 10 km away and opaque yellow flint from 40 km away were also used. The rarest kind of stone was a grey flint, for which the nearest source lies on the Indre 230 km away, and other exotic materials come from the Yonne and Loiret. The ancient inhabitants of the Loire seem to have had contacts into the Paris Basin, and also south into the Massif Central, along the Loue's southern tributaries.

For many years archaeologists have assumed that the Magdalenian reindeer hunters behaved like modern Eskimo caribou hunters, moving during the winter to follow their prey. But Dr Lawrence Keeley has now suggested that some of these French sites indicate stable winter settlements, living off fishing and food stored at the end of the summer, similar to the villages of the Kwakiutl and Nootka Indians on the north-west coast of Canada.

Mr Arvid Yanovich Peishe, the last of the Old Bolsheviks within the leadership of the Soviet Communist Party, has died at the age of 84.

Peishe, a member of the Party's ruling Politburo since 1966, was of Latvian nationality and born into a peasant household in what is now the Bauska region of Latvia on February 7, 1899. On leaving school he became a worker and also an active revolutionary, joining the Bolsheviks in 1915 when he was only 16. Pelshe took an active part in the historic events of 1917, and between the February and Bolshevik revolutions was a member of the Petrograd Soviet.

In 1918 he moved to Moscow to join the Cheka (political police) and was a participant in the unsuccessful attempt to establish Soviet power in Latvia broadcasting becoming mud-dled up by rival systems. The Commission believes in 1919. He spent most of the that the proposed European 1920s in party work in the service should have as simple a structure as possible, with an international team of professionals seconded from statements of the line of the l cering institute. The incorporation of Latvia within the Soviet Union greatly increased Pelshe's political importance as a reliable instrument of the centralised Soviet state. From 1941 until 1959 he was the Secretary of the Central Committee of the Latvian Communist Party responsible for propaganda and agitation, and in 1959 he attained the top political post in Latvia when he became First Secretary of the republic's Central Committee.

At the first Congress of the Soviet Communist Party under Leonid Brezhnev's leadership the 23rd Congress held in Moscow in 1966 - Pelshe's political career took another upward turn when he was accorded two important positions which he was to continue to hold until his death. He was one of 11 members elected to the Politburo and simultaneously he became Chairman of the Party Control Committee of the Central Committee.

As a member of the former body he was involved in the highest-level policy discussions of the past 16 years and as chairman of the latter had overall responsibility for party discipline. When senior party officials in different parts of the Soviet Union were under attack for corruption, the attitude of Pelshe's Party Control Committee was often of more decisive importance for their fate than that of the law-courts and the law-enforcement orga-DUTATIONS.

Pelshe received many state honours and enjoyed a certain prestige, even within Soviet leadership circles, as a party member of pre-revolutionary vintage. Such influence as he possessed was probably exer-cised on the side of side of stern Communist orthodoxy. He was related by marriage to the late Mikhail Suslov who almost certainly paved the way for Pelshe's entry into the Politburo in 1966 and the evidence of his career and writings suggest that he shared Suslov's uncompromising attitudes.

Contemporary Art Fair Bath Assembly Rooms

A Summer Show for the City Guildhall Art Gallery

Does art sell, and if so, what art? These may not be the most immediate questions to strike us as we look round West End gallery shows, but they have a self-evident importance just the same. And at this time of year, when what must be in sheer magnitude the most important selling show of them all, the Royal Academy's Summer Exhibition, is set down bang in the centre of London, and the country's only Contemporary Art Fair puts in its third annual appearance at Bath, crass commercial considerations cannot, and should not, be very far from the forefront of Artists, after all, have to live. As far as I know, no figures are available on the proportions af amateur to professional in the Summer Exhiition, which this year reaches its 215th edition, has an outside sponsor for the first time (IBM), and runs until August 28. Probably such figures are impossible anyway, there is so much fine shading between the full-time professional painter and the complete Sunday painter who sub-mits to the Academy entirely for the

In any case, all of them, or very nearly all, want to sell. And the sales figures for the average Summer Exhibition are absolutely amazing. Well may we sneer at the Academy for lagging pathetically behind the times, or, for that matter, for its even more pathetic attempts to catch up. We may judge this year's show better, worse or (as a rule) much the same as last year's, and carefully skirt round it as an anachronism, an anomaly or a special case. But whatever we say and think, it is undeniably there, sure of itself, and comfortably ensconced in the hearts of thousands who may not know,

And who, amazingly frequently, will put their money where there mouth is. It helps, of course, that in general the pricing of exhibits is admirably practical; it is remarkable what you can buy at the Academy for less than £100, and even the bestknown Academicians have not necessarily ascended to stratospheric prices. Also, the dominant note – almost the raison d'âtre, you might say – of the Academy is liveability. Most of the paintings and drawings are of a sensible domestic size; the great majority are representational; and this year, as noticeably since the Academy's big Post-Impressionist show a couple of years ago, there is a strong emphasis on bright colour and generally cheerful effect. Out-and-out masterpieces may be thin on the walls, but then they always are. But surely anyone except the most austere of minimalists or conceptualists could find something, somewhere in the show with which he might pleasurably live.
It would be nice to be able to say that the best paintings of the year were by the young, the hopeful and the unknown. But the Charles Wollaston Award for the most distinguished work has gone to Victor Pasmore - justifiably enough though he hardly needs it - and in general it is not only familiarity which makes one pick out and remember the works of senior Academicians such as Richard Eurich, Ruskin Spear, Carel Weight and Edward Bawden, who this year excells himself with a group of absolutely classic still-lifes, of an energy and precision which leave one incredulous of his 30 years.

Also sadly memorable are the traditional tributes to Academicians who have died in the last year: those to Allan Gwynne-Jones, Edward Wolfe and Tristram Hillier remind us of distinctive and quite wellknown talents.

The group of paintings by James Fitton, however, stir interest in an, of late, rather neglected artist whose works, especially those of the immediately postwar period, clearly deserve collected showing and reappraisal. There are works on show, also, by such distinguished Honorary Academicians as Balthus and Miro, emphasizing the Academy's recent inclination to look for newsworthy guests as a way of booking in a possibly sceptical public. It is good to see them there.

but not, I think, really necessary.

The Academy, like the National Theatre, has its own special public, people who are not necessarily dense or ill-informed, but expect safe value for their money and do not want too many nasty shocks (Even Allen Joneses, like the one on this year's poster, can count as nametry-butposter, can count as naughty-but-nice). They, surely, will keep on coming and, with gratifying frequency, buying for ever.

Probably many on this special Academy public seldom if ever set foot in a commercial West End gallery, they might find it unfamiliar and intimidating, not knowing quite what to expect, and anyway it is another world. The primary intention of the Bath Contemporary Art Fair is to have the local equivalent of that special public into the familiar surroundings of the Assembly Rooms to look at that great unknown and untrusted, Modern Art, without the qualms and hesitations which are so frequently associated with it. The whole thing functions like an antiques fair; it is opened by a celebrity, makes a splash in the local papers, and thereafter you pay your admission and wander round with no fear that you may be expected to be an expert, or importuned to buy, or frozen out by some gorgon at the desk asking pointedly what, precisely, you want. The tone is homey, the 32 dealers showing are happy to chat, and visitors have no other obligation than the house and obligation than to have a good time.

The fair itself covers only a weekend, and so is over for this year by the time you read this. But what it stands for is significant enough to deserve mention, and again it is surprising, and pleasing, to note how many who wander in just to look end up buying a piece of original artwork. After all, without this painless introduction, they might never realize that you can get something beautiful and unique for no more, necessarily, than it would cost you to get a green-faced Chinese lady or those charging elephants, preten-tiously framed, at the same store that Sold you your three-piece suite.

And though the fair has gone, the Bath Festival of which it has become an important part continues for a fortnight, with at least 15 specially mounted shows of art and craft scattered around to make a visit to Path worthwhile for even the art-sared Londoner, as well as making a most agreeable diversion for those who would be there anyway for the music or the drama.

There is another enterprise to lure unexpected people in to look at art and actually to buy it under way in London at the moment - but an unexpected part of London and in a location hardly less exotic to Londoners than Bath Assembly Rooms. In the City, in the unlovely drill-hall which is what passes, since the Blitz, for the Guildhall Art Gallery, there is until June 18 A Summer Show for the City, presented jointly by three dealers from farther west, the Maclean Gallery, the Maas Gallery and J. L. W. Bird.

For the occasion the nastier features of the space have been obscured with pale blue drapes, and the whole attractively hung with nineteenth and twentieth-century British paintings and drawings. The public aimed at is presumably directors of City companies who might be persuaded to buy art for their offices, plus less well-heeled City workers who might possibly be tempted to something at the lower end of the price range, and even if Rush Hour. are not too unfamiliar. And the overall quality is admirable: you can see, for instance, major paintings by Sickert and Clausen as well as lesser works by the same artists; a very tempting range of Victorian oils and watercolours, outstanding among them a weird visionary piece by the little-known Archer Stanley, Britain's Health and Britain's Greatness, which evokes mid-Victorian ship-building in terms that John Martin would have recognized and appreciated; and finely contrasted records of First World War scenes and characters by Eric Kennington and C. R. W. Nevinson. Any office would be graced by an addition from this admirable show; one only hopes that City money-men can be persuaded to see it that way.

Vietnam revisited

Television

The smell of death - it was there when you were eating your rations - it was like you were eating death." That was a marine's most vivid memory A pretty young woman recalled with trembling voice the day they dug up rows of kneeling skeletons outside Hue, each with its skull smashed in from behind, in a gunsight image doubtless etched subliminally on the mind of some nameless American cameraman, an arm flails wildly out of a swamp, the gun barks once, and the arm falls limp into the water

One of the most ghoulishly celebrated images ever to come out of the Vietnam war was that of the Victoring officer being summarily despatched in the street in last week's edition of Vietnam (Channel Four that event was piped into British homes, beginning with the man walking toward his doom like one already dead, and ending with the sudden gush of blood. Another of the war's most pivotal images, of naked girls napalm burning on their backs, was shown last night, together with film of wounded peasants cowering in terror as helicopters circled relentlessly above, and numerous pictures of the dead and dying.

The makers of this series are. t seems, aware of the possibility that some viewers may be sent by the bloody footage into a morbid trance. I would say not only that that was a certainty but that viden-enthusiasts who collect hard-core sadism wil now be gratefully adding to their hoards.

Those who can keep the violence in perspective, how-ever, will get a remarkable esson in recent history: there has never been anything like this televised record of a war before, and there probably never will be again. The scrupulous care with which the international production team set about establishing the truth has resulted in three parallel accounts (American, and North and South Vietnamese), each of which is itself split into strands representing the viewpoints of rulers and ruled. Richard Nixon and Robert McNamara may not have given interviews, but just about everyone else has, and astonishing their testimony is. Students of American politics will have been riveted by the filmed record of how Lyndon Johnson came to break the news of his retirement to the world. We watched him running concerned, it was not quite through an early version of his speech, scratching his chin and listening to see if the words iounded intensuc enough Then his aides told of their opposition, and of the frenzied redrafting, and then we saw the final broadcast, a perfect Uturn. Mulitary historians will have betened attentively last night as a helicopter pilot described his on the whole rather exhilarating "nine to five job". Social historians will have pricked up their ears at talk of Saigon being divided into "white" and "black" sides, with even the locals accepting the foreign racial barriers. Ordinary morials will have looked, listened, and thought.

Woodwind choruses were crisply poised against the heartbeat patter of word and percussion. And the precise weighting of forces in the final "Laudate Eum in cybalis" held their resonance in just that fine balance between animation and suspension, the human and the hieratic which was acheived so memorably in this performance

Stravinsky was touring his opera-oratorio Oedipus Rex Seiji Ozawa was a living even as he began work on the Symphony, and it was a fruitful piece of programming, typical of the Philharmonia, to juxtapose the two works. The same primitive heartbeat shuddered through Ozawa's vibrant unrethrough Ozawa's vibrant, unre-mittingly exciting reading.

If anything, the sniping menace and terror of the chorus, Ozawa's breathless continuity from block to block, and the immediacy of the conflict between Oedipus and Jocasta threatened here to topple the work's monumental, ritual quality. Stravinsky was, after all, insistent that this should be a still-life not an action drama.

London debuts provided relief, of course, and Rehmund Korupp drew an excellent sound from his cello in the unaccompanied opening of Beethoven's Sonata Op 69, yet later in this initial Allegro, despite his fluency, he was less secure in both tone and intonation. The remaining movements, however, displayed a sinewy concentration which showed that he, and his pianist, Michael Dussek, had the heart of the matter. Next we had a rare and welcome opportunity of hearing some Reger, the Suite Op 131c No 3, and Mr Korupp was, paradoxically, more secure in this unaccompanied work than elsewhere. Contrary to the composer's undeserved reputation, the Suite is a fine piece, and its long, often soaring, lines were beautifully sustained in this performance. It all contrasted sharply with the dull Breval sonata which followed.

Chopin's Sonata Op 65

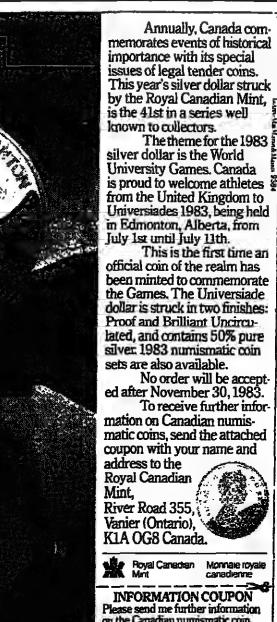

this reading of the outer movements had a particularly strong emotional current. Yet, so far as the cellist was features, not least his initial entry, of which he needs to make more.
It is hard to know what would constitute an idiomatic performance of Camilleri's Fantasia Concertante No 4, a collection of effectively written yet musically nondescript bits and pieces for solo violin.

Lorraine McAslan's forth-right, boundingly confident execution almost persuaded one that it had some value, but her true mettle was shown in Bartók's Rhapsody No 1. Fiery and spontaneous, she produced a wide variety of tone in this that was invariably apt.

Investmit US hopes for lower interest rates fade

New York
The US money supply figures announced on Friday have dashed hopes that the Federal Reserve is attempting to re-strain money growth. May was the worst month for money growth for more than two years.
During the month money M1 has risen $13.9bn (£8.6bn), and this increase has arrested a weak, but perceptible tendency for interest rates to decline.

Instead, interest rates are rising again, as always happens these days when the financial markets are faced with unexpectedly large money growth. The 90-day Treasury bill yield is back almost to 8.5 per cent from below 8 per cent a month ago.

OTTOMAN BANK

Incorporated in Turkey with Limited Liability

Balance Sheet The Balance Sheet total, £340 million, is down by £20 million due to a fall of 17 per cent in the value of the Turkish Lira against Sterling. This fall could not be offset entirely by the increase in our Turkish business nor, as regards our business outside Turkey, by the increased value of the US

Profit and Loss

The Profits outside Turkey have continued to rise, due to high interest rates and the rise in the Dollar income of our subsidiaries in terms of Starling.

The contribution of our profits in Turkey to the year's results has fallen considerably as a result of the devaluation of the Turkish Lira and the economic crisis which caused many firms to suspend payment, necessitating large provisions. Out of the sums awaiting transfer, after the payment of taxes and passing TL500 millions (£1,663,617) to local reserves, the Committee have considered it prudent that only £800,000 should be available as profits compared with £1.792,121 the previous year.

only £800,000 should be available as profits compared with £1,792,121 the previous year.

The 1982 Profit and Loss account therefore shows a profit of £2,907,975 compared with £3,735,457 in 1981.

After including the 1981 profits from Turkey transferred in 1982, ie £1,645,114, the amount available at 31st December 1982 is £3,786,876 against £2,578,231 at end 1981. Taking into account the continuing economic crisis in 1 turkey the Committee have decided to pass to Reserves

From the remaining amount of £2,486,876 the Committee recommend a distribution of £4.50 per share payable on 17th Inne 1983. In conformity with Article 40 of the Statutes, £111,111 will be distributed to the holders of Founders' shares at the rate of £514.40 per share and £111,111 to the Committee.

Ossumittee Mr Desmond Reid, the Chairman of the London Committee, died suddenly on April 23rd last whilst on the Bank's business in Turkey. This was a great shock and is a tragic loss to the Bank, as well as to his many friends. Baron Hottinguer and Monsieur Mallet retire at this meeting. We thank them for the outstanding service which they have given to the Bank. The Committee have invited Monsieur Jacques de Fouchier to fill one of the vacancies thus created.

In Turkey, 1982 saw the consolidation of the authority of the present regime and progress towards the return of parliamentary Government.

On the economic front, the 1980 stabilisation programme was maintained. Inflation was reduced to about 30 per cent per annum and the current account deficit was halved. On the international front, Turkey's credit standing has been re-established. Internally, tight money policies and high interest rates led to a fall in industrial output. Unemployment worsened and many companies had to face grave financial

The Banking Sector experienced a hazardous year, due to the unfavourable interest rate structure and the substantial increase in doubtful debts.

In these unfavourable conditions, our branches increased their deposits and turnover satisfactorily. Nevertheless, we were unable to avoid an increase in our doubtful debts and have thought it imperative to make large provisions. The outlook for 1983 is not encouraging and the profitability of our Turkish operations may be substantially reduced this

Last year, a report was given on our negotiations for the transfer of our branch network in Turkey to a company emablished under local law in which the Ottoman Bank would have retained a minority interest. For the time being these discussions have not reached any conclusion.

Net Asset Value
In 1980, the Committee published their valuation of the net assets of the Bank at £60 per share. The Committee believe it would be helpful to bring this valuation up to date. The greater part of the Bank's assets is in currencies other than Sterling and is subject to exchange rate fluctuations. A considerable part consists of banking premises, difficult to value, and shares subject to market fluctuations. With these reservations, the Committee have calculated that the net assets of the Bank stood at about £80 per share at end 1982.

Sinclair invest £2m

More than £2m is to be invested by Sinclair Research in estabishing a new advanced research centre in Cambridge to be known as MetaLab. Clive Sinclair says that the centre will act as an incubator, fostering new products from initial idea to commercial launch. It will not only carry on existing work in computers and television but will open up new fields, from battery technology to robotics. The company has recruited Richard Cutting, at present managing director of Cambridge Consultants, to be responsible for the centre, together with Sinclair directors Jim Westwood and David

We didn't set out to earn a reputation for being different. Or even to make a name for doing more.

Our aim 25 years ago was simply to build and support computers that were both practical and reliable.

But one thing led to another and today you probably know us as one of the biggest computer companies in the world.

The VAX 11/780 set the pace in 32-bit computing four years ago.

think you'll appreciate us even more when you come to expand your system.

That's because our computers work easily together. In a word, compatibility.

Which is why so many large companies choose Digital.

We believe that one of the most practical things we have done is bridge the gap between our computer generations. From microboards right up to our largest system.

It means software written on one Digital computer can be easily made to work on another Digital computer.

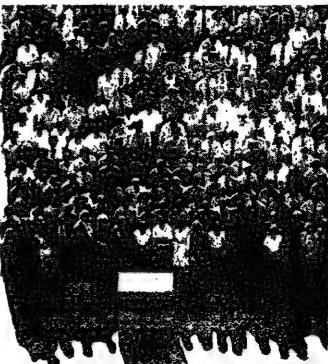

Your software and hardware investment is protected, giving greater productivity and more flexibility for growing companies.

It naturally follows that we design our new computers to work with all our systems. Today and tomorrow But computers are only as good as the people who support them.

If the answer is "I sell computers" then ABS assumes the candi-date has grasped the essential fact that selling is vital, a profession to be proud of and a necessary part of business life.

Salesmen are still looked down on in the British information technology industry. Their knowledge of business systems, their extrovert personalities and the fact that they provide orders to keep the company going are all generally met with distant.

But for all companies the role of the salesman is vital, and for the most successfull their status is justifiably high. The most successfull of all companies in information technology is IBM. The heads of its UK and world operations are almost all former selesmen; indeed they still have clients assigned to their care and it is still their job to get

The British-owned ICL used to have a pretty poor reputation for selling, there was a feeling that its salesmen would answer the acid test with a hearty Well, old boy. I'm actually in those computer things". But under its new management the mood is changing.

ABS Computers, the British all on the response the customer has given to to his virtuoso has an acid test for performance in presenting the company,

Selling is, however, not all glamorous presentation to the prospects board; a lot of it is hard work that never comes to fruition.

As a rule of thumb, at least a third of the prospects a salesman will pick up never turn into orders for anybody. The customer changes his mind and decides to take a completly different course.

The law of averages means that out of 20 good prospects only three or, at the most, four will turn into orders for the salesman. The other 16 or 17 will be lost to the competition.

But the real headache is that it is not at all clear at the begining of the long process of wooing the prospect which three or four will turn into an order and which 16 or 17 will not

The world wants one, said Fernandez, president and chief executive of Gavilan, based in Campbell, California. He re-ferred to the object of all the attention - a computer with a disk drive, printer, internal memory, a display screen and software just like most other computers have. Only this computer was small enough to be powered by batteries and to fit in a briefcase portables, is suffering and might become a casualty of the increasing competition in a market it helped create.

The new breed of portable computers makes some of the older machines like the Osborne look immovable by comparison. The Osborne and numerous followers fold into a case about as large as a sewing machine case. They weigh 20 to 30 pounds and can be carried from one place to another, but cannot easily be used en route because they do not work long on batteries. Once known portable computers, these ma-chines are now dubbed transportable computers, to distinguish them from smaller mahines that are more easily

The more portable machines like the Gavilan weigh less than 15 pounds and can fit in a briefcase - thus they are called briefcase computers or note-While transportable computers use power-hungry cathde ray tube displays, the briefcase-sized computers gen-erally use the luquid crystal dispalys that calculators have. One drawback is that the best displays now abailable can show only eight lines of text at a time, compared with 24 or more on a cathode ray tube. That makes the briefcase machine somewhat harder to use than the larger Gavilan's machine, which will sell for $4,000, has built-in software, a tiny disk drive, and a anique feature that allows users to move the pointer on the screen and perform tasks by running their fingers along a touch-sensitive tab. Many other companies also showed transthat not all will succeed.

It is easy to introduce one product but its difficult to build a company, said Robert Jaunich president of Osborne Computer. Osborne, despite a highly successful initial product, has fallen victim to competition.

In addition to portability, the Osborne I offered a highly altractive price with software included. More than 100,000 of the machines were sold in 1982, making Osborne a $100m company, according to some estimates. Analysts say, how-ever, that the company has not been prolitable. Somewhat similar difficulties befell Grid Systems, which last year introduced the most advanced portable computer from a technological standpoint. But the product, which sells for more than $3,100, has not done as well as expected. The company has brought in new management and revamped its product and marketing strategy. Glenn T Edens, vice president of Market Development, said the strategy was working and that the company would record revenue of at least $28m in 1983 and be profitable

With technological advances occuring so rapidly, no company can expect to stay in the forefront for long. Fernandez of Gavilan said of his product: "It has been hard to get it there. Now it is even harder to keep it

"Last year we produced all and lady members of the host club, gathering information at each golfing event."

Sporting Concepts, a com-pany formed about 18 months ago by Mr McEvoy and two friends to provide hospitality at sporting events, collated the statistics. Eventually, the com-pany approached Philips Business Systems with the idea of putting it on a computer.

Philips is an established sponsor of sports such as basketball and athletics, and the business systems division decided to develop a system for the PGA to run on the Philips P3500 Office Micro System, launched last November.

Part of the P3000 series, the P3500 is based on 8-bit Zilog Z80 microprocessors communicating over a system bus, based on the Intel Multibus. A single master processor controls a network of up to four "slaves" (each of which has its own Z80 chip), and handles all shared resource functions such as file and record access.

Initially, the PGA system is to have a hardware configuration of a P3500 master processor with a 10 megabyte Winchester disc, three VDUs and a 300 cps dot matrix printer. This will run under a real-time, multi-user, multitasking operating system called TurboDOS, which was developed by Software 2000 Inc. in Applications software has been written by Philips Business Systems in conjunction with Sporting Concepts and prospective users. "We have spoken to producers from BBC and ITV to find out what they said David Jones, a product systems specialist en-gineer at Philips. They are mainly interested in a leader board, and in linking the PGA system directly into CAPGEN, a small computerized caption generator which both use for putting information on to the television screen."

Linking with CAPGEN via a

V24 interface means that screen width has to be limited to 30 characters, because this is the maximum number which can be displayed on a television screen. Apart from this restriction, the only other design proviso was that the system should be easy to use by nontechnical personnel, such as radio and television commentators.

There are only three prog-rams in the system, all of which are written mainly in Basic with certain time-critical routines in Assembler. One is used to set up players' details on file to create a history for each, and a second updates the information in realtime as a tournament progress les. The third provides on-line

Further data such as yearly enquiry facilities for live media your phone bis in top and coverage or prints resumés for publication in newspapers or golfing magazines. Each player is allocated a three-digit identifying number, out expensively for smaller against a list of names as soon as a commentator enters it. The name is then displayed on the screen for verification before a further key is typed in to define the data required; for example: EL to display earnings last year or DA to show drive average.

An additional file of free text data holds extra snippets of information about players which commentators could use to entertain their audience during long pauses. This could be anything from previous successes to a particular style of Development work is 80 per cent complete and Mr Jones hopes to have the PGA system, ready for a debut at the first British event of the European tour. Starting in Tunisia, the tour will visit the UK, Spain, Portugal, France, Holland, Sweden, Germany and Italy before the end of October. At the moment there are no plans to send the PGA system to tournaments abroad, although this would be possible because the P3500 is portable and is manufactured in Germanufactured in Germanufactured in Germanufactured in Germanufacture in Germanufa many. For Lancashire's second wicket, Fowler and Hayes added 222 in 192 minutes, only one run fewer than the best partnership ever made for them against Yorkshire, by R. H. It was not a day for getting the feel of one of the old Roses battles. All Saturday's play having been lost and yesterday's start being delayed, if only by 20 minutes, there was a very small crowd. Stalls, where there used to be queues, were closed. It was ghostly and rather sad. Was it really so long ago that I saw Lancashire play Yorkshire at Old Trafford with the gates closed before the start, thousands spilling over on to the grass? Yorkshire were first in the championship and Lancashire second, which does data it, I suppose.

Surrey all out for 14 as Phillip and Foster strike

Surrey by 263 runs.

A pleasant but apparently sconsequential day ended incredibly as Surrey collapsed to 14 all out, the fifth lowest total in cricket history, only Northamptonshire and Oxford University, Nottingham-shire and Auckland failing more miserably. Their innings lasted just over an hour and extended for 14.3 overs, as they succumbed to Phillip seemingly there was none.

If the Surrey captain had to tell himself that the application of the heavy roller between the innings heavy roller between the innings had had such dramatic consequences, he would doubtless by now have leapt into the river which runs behind the ground, but it is doubtful that the wicket could be held responsible for such a stunning turn

The scorecard tells its own story. Butcher was the first to go, caught down the leg side by Richards off an intended hook. Three runs later, Needham, who had replace Howarth in the Surrey team, followed when Foster beat his intended to the control of the contro ideterminate prod. Clinton collected another single and then his captain became the first of Phillip's lbw victims, shuffling across his stumps. Two runs later, Lynch went the same way, possibly with a suspicion Hampshire go for quick runs

By Richard Streeton CANTERBURY: Hampshire with eight second tranings wickets in hand, lead Kern by 284 runs.

Kent and Hampshire, the early championship leaders, did everything possible yesterday to make up for the loss of Saturday's play. After dismissing Hampshire for 228, Kent forfeited their own first innings. In the final 75 minutes Hampshire the final 75 minutes Hampshire dutifully sought quick runs, and there should be a clear cut result today if the weather does not Hampshire's first innings was notable for a cleanly struck 50 by Jesty in an hour and an unusually restrained stay by Greenidge. Neither in quantity nor in run rate could Hampshire have been entirely satisfied with their performance.

Kent's bowling was variable on a pitch which hinted at more liveliness early on than it later

This might partly have been a tribute to Dilley's initial hostility. His first spell was distinctly fast and he did not drop very much later in muzzle velocity, though he tended to bowl too many balls the batsmen could leave along After Smith was held at short leg off Jarvis, Greenidge was over-shadowed in successive stands of 77 and 75 with Turner and Jesty. Nobody completely trusted the pitch at this stage but Turner, watching every ball on to the bat, cut and pushed runs to the onside with calm certainty.

In particular, Turner had a tense little duel with Underwood which the batsman narrowly won. Johnson, however, bowied Turner just before lunch as the batsman tried to square cut and the off spinner went on to flight the ball well in several

Jarvis and Ellison were the main sufferers as Jesty drove forcefully before Dilley brought one back down the hill to beat a defensive stroke. Greenidge late cut two vintage boundaries against Cowdrey but otherwise seldom revealed his usual belligerence. Greenidge was fourth out in the 61st over when Tavare held a stinging catch at wide mid on off Underwood and after

Sussex thwarted by Gatting century

Lord's: Sussex, with eight first for England, especially as it was innings wicker in hand, are 124 runs played at Lord's, where everyone is a selector, or has a pal whose brother armies, marching through the desert and desperate for water, used to halt, palce a bowl of beer in front of them, and offer it to Zus, arried cheerfully on, and the desertions are the desertions. Beer is a powerful diuretic, and the belief was that rain fell only when Zeus felt inclined to relieve himself. This is reported to have been successful on occasions; of those nothing.

Middlesex and Sussex seemed to be working on the same principle yesterday, for there was a profusion of sun hats on both sides, presumably to Apollo. This may be called an effective theological experiment, because although the morning was grey and gloomy, we did have some warm sunshine in when it was not, we parurally know he afternoon.

A less effective experiment, on a Lord's with quite a large crowd, ower plane, was made by Barclay, who deceided to put Middlesex in. The concourses which used to assemble for this bank holiday fixture when I A less effective experiment, on a lower plane, was made by Barclay, who deceided to put Middlesex in. He must have hoped for some movement from the pitch for his quick bowlers, and also no doubt thought it would be a good idea to bat fourth in a match reduced to two days, when Middlesex had lost the wickets of Barlow, Slack and Radley, for 54, it seemed a sound decision, but Sussex were thwarted by Gatting, who played one of the best innings I have seen from him. He had certain advantages. The Tavern boundary was short, so that Tavern boundary was short, so that even a mishit might carry for six, but he did not make many mishits. The Sussex bowling, faced with a double onslaught when Butcher got going at the other end, wavered, Barclay hardly knew where best to place his field, for which could not be blamed.

Butcher was out just before lunch, hitting a stroke for which some were inclined to criticize him, but Middlesex were after quick runs, the Gatting reached his hundred with a second consecutive six off Jones. He was bowled by Greig at 228. This innings will have improved his chances of selection

Imran will miss the World Cup

Pakistan's chances of winning the Prudential World Cap looked to be dealt a crushing blow yesterday when Imran Khan the world's best all-rounder, virtually reled himself out of the competition. John Woodcock writes. Since he first captained them, in England last summer, Pakistan have played more good cricket than at any other time slace their Test playing days began. After losing narrowly to England they overwhelmed both Australia and India in Pakistan last winter. and India in Palistan isst winter.
Imran's contract with Sussex.

Imran's contract with Sussex, drawn up only a few weeks ago, and no doubt a highly lucrative one, entitles Sussex to demand that the player be shown to be 100 per cent Pakistan. It would deprive the fit before playing in the World Cup. Imran put his name to the letter which Sussex have sent to the Pakistan Board saying that this he is not.

Yennan's injury is a stress fracture to be possible to be present the players, asked to choose their World XI, would have Imran as their first choice, not least because he perer spares himself.

After Gatting went, Tomlins carried cheerfully on, and the declaration, at 275, came after 59 overs. Sussex showed themselves eager to take up the challenge, Green was run out at 20, but Barclay and Mendis batted well. After 15 overs, the score was 64. The Middlesex fast bowlers several times beat the bat, and Gatting set attacking fields, so micks went for four. Mendis was bowled by Emburey at 76. Perhaps the pitch was by now sufficiently dried to help spin. Barclay's yellow helmet, his prerogative as president of the Buttercups, proved another power-ful totem in bringing out the sun.

For the second day running, the Northamptonshire quick bowlers got much the better of the Leicestershire batsmen. Tim Lamb, for the second time within 24 hours, the first time being in the John Player League match on Sanday, removed both Gower and Davison at small cost to himself, and, in fact, Gower has fallen to his medium pace three times this season already. Leicestershire, who were put into bat, were bowled out for 219, Lamb taking four for 49 in 27 overs, and Griffiths four for 46 in 16. Only two overs of spin just before lunch were bowled in the innings.

The Northampton ground all red brick and football terracing, is not a particularly attractive place on a cloudy bank holiday. The sun came out for Gower, however, as indeed it should, and he was soon making the most of it. His first scoring stroke was a flick off his legs off Kipil Dev for six, and he then booked and ondrove the blond Mallender to the boundery off successive halls Lamb now replaced Kapil Dev and Gower, driving outside the off stump, was caught at the wicket. Old Trafford: Yorkshire, with all their first-innings wickets in hand, are 281 behind Lancashire. Joana Durie of Bristol, aged 22, will play Mima Jausovec for a place On the sort of grey, mostly bleak day when they would probably have in the women's singles final of the French championships. Yesterday been happy not to have had to bat, Fowler and Hayes both made hundreds for Lancashire against Yorkshire at Old Trafford, They Miss Durie gave what may have career. She beat Tracy Austin, 6-1, had what luck they needed and rode it well. At close of play, Yorkshire were 20 for no wicket, Lancashire

He brims over with confidence, especially when, as now, he is among the rans. His first-class innings this season have been 133, 7 (run out), 23, 73 not out, and yesterday's 156 not out. He drove freely and there was no one to make a monkey of him outside his offsturn, as happened in Australia.

Miss Truman useed to say that she wished she could always play as she did when beating Sandra Reynolds 6-0, 6-0 in the 1959 Italian final. Miss Durie may come to have similar feelings about yesterday's match, it was no flash in the pan. She has reached the last 16 of the other three grand slam championships and here, in Paris, has beaten seeds in three consecutive matches.

Miss Durie has advanced fast

Miss Dire has advanced last since November, 1980, when she had an operation for a prolapsed disc in her back. For the last week she has been nursing a slightly strained groin muscle but has practised daily with Alan Jones, her coach. "To prace set moving and coach, "to warm, get moving, and get with it".

Even the champion for the last two years, Kevin Curren, of South Africa, is not expected to win for the third time. The seedings say he will be beaten in the final by Steve Denton, but such a meeting may be prevented by Patrick Cash, an Australian who, at the age of 18, is attempting to become the youngest Beckenham men's champion. The last man to win Beckenham three times in succession was John Newcombe (1964-66) and it has Australia's best prospect since Newcombe. After taking the maximum three sets to defeat Jacques Manset, an American who is 501 places beneath him in the world rankings, Cash said that he felt he played well. The fifth-seeded Australian did not drop his service in his 6-3, 6-7, 6-3 victory.

of the Tomatin Trophy is as difficult as difficult as difficult as predicting the weather pattern on Loch Fyne, where the series is being sailed. Equally mystifying is the fact that after four days, a dozen of the 240 competing crews have still not yet claimed their complementary bottle of ten-year-old Tomatin scotch. Indeed some skippers might well have drowned their sorrows yesterday by polishing off their bottle in one session. It was that sort of race, the fourth of the series and the second over an Olympic-type course. Conditions before the start seemed right for a reasonable race, with a gentle southerly breeze blowing straight down the loch. The early starters had a passable windward leg for the first round, but as the morning worse first round, but as the morning wore on, the wind veered and died, leaving many boats stranded on the wrong side of the course. Races turned into processions, courses were shortened and strong courses were shortened and strong men were reduced to nervous wrecks. Some were heard muttering "Never again", but the winners, of course, were all smiles. Barry

European first for the Ballesteros machine

Severiano Ballesteros, the United States Master Golfer, won his first tourdament of the European seison at Sandwich yesterday. He had a final round of 71 for a total of 278, two under the difficult par of Royal St George's, in the PGA Champton-this content of the PGA C

St George's, in the PGA Championship sponsored by Sun Alliance.

He beat Ken Brown (69 yesterday), and Sandy Lyle (71) by two strokes. Ballesteros won f15,000 and thus leaps to third place in the Ryder Cup list, behind Nick Paldo and Lyle. Brown, runner-up for the fourth time in st. PGA Championships, shared f15,650 with Lyle and thus moves up to fourth place.

There was a clearly identifiable turning point in the championships. Lyle, two strokes behind overnight, had stolen ahead of Ballesteros at the seventh and held-his stender lead for six holes as the two of them recied off par figures. Suddenly the picture changed at the long 14th, a short par five for these mighty men at 505 yards.

Lyle hooked his drive into thick grass and, bravely (or foothardily) going for the green with a three wood, he pushed the ball into even thicker rough and it was never seen again. There was then the extraordinary sight of Ballesteros and Brian Waites. Lyle's two opponents. There was a clearly identifiable five minutes while Lyle himself

The sun shame down on the All England jumping course yesterday as Paul Schockemoble, of Germany, the reigning European champion, chained the £7,000 first prize in the Everest Double Glazing Grand Priz. He was riding the 12-year-old Deister, the horse on which he won the British Imping Derby at Hickstead lest year.

Michael Whitaker, of Britain, riding Mr and Mrs R. H. Fenwick's Owen Gregory finished second. Whitaker has just returned from Barcelona where he won five competitions and was a member of the winning Nationa Cup team. Yesterday be finished just ahead of Gerd Wiltiang from Germany on the English-bred Piccadilly, who won the main competition here on Saturday.

Schockemoble said after his victory that the going was still holding but Deister is equally happy on hard and soft ground. He attributed the horse's untypical 111-5 fanits in Sunday's Nation's Cup event to Deister's habit of looking around and being distracted. On Sunday his attention was caught by one of the officials holding a red flag Shockemoble and Deister are likely to be the background of the European Championships at Hickstead in July.

Pam Carruthers had designed a big course for yesterday's composition and it produced only six clear rounds out of 41 starters. The water jump claimed the most victims—rution and it produced only six clear rounds out of 41 starters. The water jump claimed the most victims — Norbert Koof on Fire, Eddie Macken on Carrols Wendy, and Malcolm Pyrah on Towerlands Anglezarke all collected four faults there.

David Broome and Last Resort, who jumped so beautifully in Sunday's Nations Cup event to help to help to Britain into third place, had two fences down yesterday. But Broome, who has brought Last Resort on so carefully since he brought him from Canada last year, was well pleased with the horse's performance during the meeting.

Of the six who went through to performance during the meeting.

Of the six who went through to the sixth round, France's Andre Chenu on Impedouni, and Fienre Durand on Jappeloup both had fence's down, as did Captain Gerry Mullins, of Ireland, on Rockbarton.
This left Whitaker, Wiltfang and Schockemöhle to jump off against the dock the clock.

Schockemodie to jump on against the clock.

Wiltfang, the first to go, collected eight faults in 47.5 seconds. Whitaker also had two down and finished in 46.3 second which left it wide open for Schockemökle who only had to have a clear round to win. In the event, he too, knocked one down but he said afterwards that Deister kicked it so hard that it made him pick his feet up for the rest of the course which he completed without error.

Fearless Lad staked his claim to be regarded as the best five furlong specialist in this country when he put up a really spirited display to win the Temple Stakes at Sandown Park yesterday. Furlously ridden by Lester Piggott, Fearless Lad caught up in the last few strides to pip Boy Trumpeter and Chellaston Park, a rival of old, by a neck and the same.

With Sweet Monday finishing like a rocket in fourth place on their heels, this was a pulsating end to a heels, this was a pulsating end to a sprint which had started at what seemed like a million miles an hour, thanks to Brondesbury's teansway tactics. These won him six of his seven races as a two-year-old, but there was always a big doubt that he would be able to sustain such a acorching gallop up Sandown's stiff fre-furlong shute against seasoned campaigners.

Brondesbury's backers knew their fate as early as halfway. He was headed by Boy Trumpeter and there then ensued a hectic duel between the two stable companions. Boy Trumpeter, ridden by Geoff Baxter, and Chellaston Park, ridden by Pat Eddery, until Lester Piggon played his trump and drove Fearless Lad up their inside alongside the far rail. The bustering gallop set by Brondesbury and continued by Boy Trumpeter was responsible for the Trumpeter was responsible for the time of I min 3.57sec, which was by far the fistest of the meeting, comparatively speaking. At the 10th, Sigel scored a birdie with a three iron to 10 feet which must have seemed like an eagle. Gone was all the stress of his game of the week before, and he was home in 34, hitting the ball beautifully. Nearest to his score was a 73 from

Northern Ireland and Wales have

Northern Ireland and Wales have injury problems for tonight's British Championship match at Windsor Park. The Irish-captain, Martin O'Neill, who has rejected a new contract with Norwich City, is doubtful with a hamstring strain. It prevented him training yesterday and Northern Ireland's Manager, Billy Bingham, said: "We shall delay a decision about his fitness until as late as possible."

If O'Neill is ruled out, Bingham may push the Luton Town defender, Mal Donaghy, into Midfield, or introduce Iim Cleary, of Gentoran.

Wales also delay selection. Alan Davies, who played a key role in Minchester United's FA Cup win, makes his debut, but there are doubts about the Fulham forward, Gordon Davies, the Chelsea defender Ioey Jones and Jeremy Charles, of Swansea, who are recriving treatment following Saturday.

achieved it in spite of taking five at the short seventh, and he hit 15 greens in regulation figures. In his present state of euphoria after winning four points at Hoylake, it has only taken him the weekend to throw off fittigue. Bill Tuten, reigning American public links champion, took over the lead with 67, putting himself into a good mood by starting with two birdies. But it is not the low scores that matter, it is the high ones, and this evening might see a prolonged playoff to bring the field down to 64. The only advantage in scoring low these two days is that the draw is based on an automatic formula in which the low scorers meet the high. The wind died as though out of deference to the players, and should it blow hard today it would be dealing a harsh blow to those whose the contward half in the wrong wind can. FOOTBALL Benfica secure title for twenty-fifth time league championship hopes could be undermined by Schalke 04's determination to avoid relegation. A surprising 1-0 win away to Bayern Munich last Saturday means a draw with Hamburg would be good enough to save Schalke, which could leave the save schalke, which could be seen for the save seen for Bayerne.

Paris (AFP) - Benfica won their twenty-fifth Portuguese football championship over the weekend with one match remaining, while the West German season comes to an end on Saturday with two clubs still in contention for the title. SV Hamburg, the European champions, lead Werder Bremen on goal difference, but Bremen are considered narrow favourites for their first title since 1965.

more. Lester Pigott will be looking to Ore to give him another triumph in one of his favourite races in 16 days time. Having won the Queen Alexandra Stakes over two miles and threequarters at Royal Ascot last year. Ore has sufficient stamina for the job. More recently he revealed a hitherto unknown amount of speed when outpacing the subsequent Haydock winner, Future Spa. over a mile and five furlongs at Newbury on ground that was considered too soft for him.

Now much will surely depend on whether he can give 3lb to Khairpour, who will be wearing blinkers for the first time. I was not alone in thinking that Khairpour would have won the Yorkshire Cup at York last month had he not swerved away from the whip so violently a furlong and a half from at York last month had he not swerved away from the whip so violently a furlong and a half from the finish. It was such a had swerve — it took him half way across the course — that most waching thought that it must have been caused by a broken leg or something equally

Ascot Gold Cup just as it did 12 still did well even to stay in the months ago when both races were saddle let alone get Khairpour back saddle let alone get Khairpour back onto an even keel and into the hunt. With Fulke Johnson Houghton's stable beginning to strike form -they had three winners on Saturday

- Khairpour looks poised to do better now just as long as blinkers have a correcting influence. He has the clear beating of Broken Rail judged on how they fared at York.

Earlier in the season Centroline. Khairpour and Broken Rail finished fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively, behind Diamond Shoal in the John Porter Stakes at Newbury Now my Porter Stakes at Newbury. Now my selection will be meeting Centroline on 3lb better terms for a neck. Add to that the knowledge that Centroline has been laid off with a cough and the scales are firmly tilted in Khairpour's favour.

Visitors to Sandown Park today will be looking to the Henry II case.

Stakes to shed some light on the In the circumstances, John Reid III Magdalena (35) won her land race at Goodwood had to be seen to be believed, Precoclous (4.10) is aprly named because he is the most forward of all the two-year-olds that Cecil has subjected to fast work this spring. Word of his ability preceded him to the course at Newmarket on 2,000 Guineas day with the result that he started favourite at 6-4. That confidence was not remotely misplaced because Precocious won by three lengths from King of Clubs and Magild. In the meantime both the second and the third have paid by 10 lengths at Newbury.

Carabineer, who was successful over today's course and distance towards the end of April before tosing somewhat unheckily at Salisbury and the Thirsk winner, Farasita, who comes from a stable noted for turning out fast two-yearolds, also bossts winning form, but nothing that compares with what Precocious has achieved,

Lions need to sidestep the mischief and discord

Junior Crossus. When the not be tolerated in the five nations Australians cutrepressur. David championships and Fitzgerald later Lord, trained his sights on the Lions said that men who practised these with allegations that 12 certainly and 22 possibly of the 31 players had signed contracts of intent, the potential harm could cripple the tour. If the New Zealand Rugby Union, or the four home unions, or both, insisted on the expulsion of these players as professionals, the rest might as well so bome too there could be no sense in carrying on the programme with a parched-

The All Blacks could be affected Mr Lord is known to have trotted from one to another of the current were he, or an agent, to publish names, New Zealand would have to act. The New Zealand chairman, Mr C A Blazey, a retired senior insurance officer with a lifelong preference for facts above fancies,

"Unless we have positive proof." Mr Blazey says, "we won't budge. In my view, nothing has changed. Mr Lord's statement merely repeats rumours we have been hearing for months." Brave words. All the same, one cannot sidesteo the possibility that Mr Lord and his henchmen will cross the Rubicon and cast the die, thus terminating the Lions' tour.

A stout Cortez of modern rugby indignantly to nonsensical statemight well gare with a wild armise ment by the captain and coach of upon activities which could seriousty damage the New Zealand tour by Caran Fitzgerald's touring British Lious and have catastrophic effects on pon the game as a whole.

Much was the mischief implicit in sutements last week about the promotion of a professional troupe of 208 players who in a span of two years would each become as rich at a juntor. Crossus, When the most be tolerated in the five nations of course. In the matches of the last forcast. In the matches of the last

Fitzgerald

Ashburton (Reuter) - Bryce Rope, the All Blacks coach, yesterday claimed that Claran Fitzgerald, the British Lious captain, was one of the worst offenders as the two sides continued their row over illegal

Rope said: "From what I've seen of the Lions' play, they're only too wilding to lie on the hall and the it. There appears to be no attempt on their part to free the hall or to get up and drive it away. Several forwards are quite happy to flop on the hall when it's on the ground. I think Fitzgerald is particularly guilty."

Fitzgerald is particularly guilty."

Fitzgerald said he was shocked by the allegation. Rope said the Lions can expect more of the same in the international match in Christchurch. He said his side will play hard but

He said his side will play hard but there will no deliberate stamping.

methods were "cowards," alarm-bells suddenly began ringing out Even more serious was McBride's and cast the die, thus terminating the Lions' tour.

On top of this mischief has come the harm implicit in the Lions' reactions to New Zealand methods of rucking man and ball and to New Zealand standards of refereeing. There were warnings that the Lions could be a little thin-skinned for modern sport when they reacted

Even more serious was McBride's acknowledgement that the refereeing of the match in question, and which presumbally was faulty because it had permitted the samping of men, Fitzgerald himself of and lain Paxton in particular, was consistent with the kind of refereeing we have encountered so far on tour." Stout Cortez upon his peak might therefore be staring in a excursion into fantasy to justify this forecas. In the matches of the last seek, against Wellington, a hair-raiser won in the last 10 minutes. and Manawati, another hair-raiser characterised by more of blunder than of the blood spilled by Fitzgerald and Paxon, the Lious threequarters once again spent much time looking like stragglers in much time looking like stragglers in a dole-queue, yet, when the strains were severest (Wellington 19-18 with nine minutes to play, and Manawatu 18-15 with about 15 minutes to play), the reaction of the Lions was magnificent.

Wretched play at other times, by a dreary forward pack against Wellington in the first half, by an unprotected Laidlaw suffering a merciless hiding from that fierce little All Black of other days, Donaldson, has at times promoted Donaldson has at times promoted the thought that the Lions may be incapable of developing a central character because the sum of their character pecutive the sum of the inferior parts appears to be so much greater than the sum of the superior. Yet Telier knows where he is aiming. Fitzgerald and his players summer. Program and ms prayers keep demonstrating, at the unlike-liest moments, an ability to summen up the blood and stiffen

There is a considerable, indeed urgent need of cool minds and heads to ride out what might beads to ride out what might otherwise cause observers to exclaim that this was a week that ought never to have been. Given placatory words and absolute determination by all parties to establish harmony within and without the tour, there could be a pot of gold for the Lions at the foot of the Lancaster Park rainbow on Saturday.

Funches can take Bruno beyond four

It may be the last day of school be there after four rounds. I hope so, for Frank Bruno, but the end of term feeling could be missing for him at the Albert Hall tonight. Teacher may not walk into class with a spring in his step, pat him on the head and let him get on with whatever he wants to do Just whatever he wants to do. Just because discipline has slackened a bit, and three, including Kaylor's opponent have played hookey, it does not mean that the big Wandsworth lad can go home early as well. Mr Barrett will attend to Demmins.

According to the South Africans At first sight it looks a formality for Bruno. Funches was beaten by Gordon Ferris on points at Wembley last March, though the American was unlucky not to get a decision. The 34-year-old New Yorker is no pushover, even though considerably lighter than Bruno. He does not have a reputation for folding. Funches has won only one of his last six contests but he has

He has gone the distance with Ossie Ocasio, the World Boxing Association cruiserweight champion and his No I, Randy Stephens. and his No I, Randy Stephens. Funches has been stopped only by Reynaldo Saipes in three rounds by cuts, John Taie in seven, and Eddie Gregg – an unbeaten heavyweight prospect – in eight only last January.

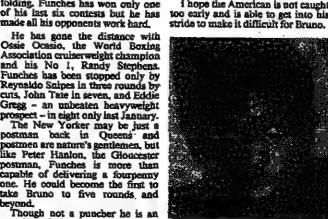

The New Yorker may be just a postman back in Queens and postmen are nature's gentlemen, but like Peter Hanlon, the Gloucester postman, Funches is more than capable of delivering a fourpenny one. He could become the first to take Bruno to five rounds and beyond.

Though not a puncher he is an experienced boxer and knows how to look after himself. I expect him to

For we will only know more about Bruno's potential if we see how he faces up to pressure after the fourth.

The American's best contest was against Mike Koranicki, whom he beat on points last October in Johannesburg, Koranicki gave John L Gardner a right old battle. The South Africans were very taken with Funches and considered him as "one of the most skilful boxers to manusworth lad can go home early have visited our shores. Funches as well. Mr Barrett will attend to calmly faced every threat that Demmings. Dorey and Rowley. Koranicki had to offer and Bruno will have to take care of countered in masteriy fashion with a barry Funches before starting his variety of combinations.

Kimmage gives Ireland a rare day to remember By John Wilcockson

Paul Kimmage, aged 21, one of three cycling brothers from Dublin, will exchange the green of Ireland for the yellow jersey of leadership in the Milk Race this morning after an extraordinary eighth stage across the Pennimes yesterday. He is the first Irishman to achieve such an honour since Peter Doyle in 1972.

Everyone was expering an interest of the mountains extraordinary eighth stage across the Pennimes yesterday. He is the first Irishman to achieve such an honour since Peter Doyle in 1972.

Everyone was expecting an assualt by the talented climbers on the 94-mile stage from Kirkby to Halifax, but men like Styks, of Czechoslovakia, became prisoners in a bunch around which a tactical curtain was drawn. Doing the tactical disruption were the Great Britain professionals and the Irish, teams who had men in a pathfinding break that developed around the 20-mile mark.

Bohac, of Czechoslovakia, and Stauff, of West Germany, began the move, followed by Goscilo and Muzoyka. "I went with them," Kimmage said, "then Sean Yates, the professional, came up with another Czech and a Dane". These were Klass and Sandahl.

Nine of the eight leaders was within four minutes of the overnight leader, Rottler, of West Germany, except Kimmage and Yates. With more than 70 miles left to ride, including the six longest climbs in the race so far, the break's chance of success looked slim.

But it soon became obvious that Yates and Kimmage were being aided by the Poles and the Czechoslovaks, who wanted to make up time in the team race. Neither the Dane nor the German contributed to the pacemaking, and it was no surprise when these two

Solicitors £9,000-£16,500 Doncaster & Nottingham

The National Coal Board's Legal Department has three vacancies for Solicitors arising from the career progression of existing staff. The posts will be located at our Doncaster and Eastwood

We are looking for young, possibly newly qualified Solicitors with above average academic records and broadly based experience in articles, and also young experienced Solicitors who are seeking the legal environment we offer.

Considerable scope exists for progress and personal development in this forward looking legal office, which is closely associated with the many new developments taking place both in today's mining industry and in certain aspects of the law.

A wide range of important and challenging work is offered in the fields of litigation, commercial, mining, employment and plan-ning law. Within this framework two posts are likely to have a bias towards litigation and another towards commercial work. The rewards are attractive and include a commencing salary in the range of £9,000 to £16,500 per annum.

Please write with details of your career to date to:-

C. T. Peach, M.A. LL.B., National Coal Board, Legal Department, 23 Regent Square, Doncaster DN1 2DU.

Applications are invited from solicitors with experience of large commercial disputes and with a good academic background to deal with a wide variety of commercial litigation and arbitration, much of it international in character. All successful applicants will be required to responsibility. One of the successful applicants will have a bias towards matters of employment law. It is unlikely that newly qualified solicitors

Island sanctuary mourns the passing of the puffin

Puffins gave their Norse name to the Island of Lundy, but now they are disappearing from the three-mile long. rocky outcrep in the Bristol

For more than three years Mr Keith Mortimer (above), Lundy's 25-year-old bird warden, has watched the numbers dwindle. In the 1950s there were several thousand and they represented a distinctive feature of the island. A ew years ago the number was down to no more than 100 and this month only 60 or so have keen sighted.

· The decline of fratercula artica, an unspectacluar bird but for its huge bill, coloured blue, red and yellow in summer, is not confined to Lundy bet applies to its dwindling colonies in the south of Britain.

Mr Mortimer believes pollation is largely responsible and that puffins may be following their traditional food supply - particularly sand eels and sprats - northwards.

To protect the remaining few, even the relatively small number of keen birdwatchers who make their way by helicopter or boat to the island - 11 miles off Hartland Point in north Devon - face climbing restrictions during the breeding season on the precarious cliffs where they nest.

Mr Mortimer, who gave up his job as a fitter in Bristol to live on the island with his wife, Michele, said: "It would be terrible if the puffins left. They are Lundy Island."

Puffins live on the sea during the winter and return ashore to breed, making nesting burrows by hacking into the soil of tarf-covered seacliffs. On Lundy they are confined this year to a steep cliff on the west side, a dangerous place for the photographer or watcher who has to lean precarionsly over the edge to catch a sight of them sitting on rocky ledges below or skimming the waves.

The island was bought by

There are only 17 islanders. all employed by the Landmark Trust, and apart from a few sheep and cattle the main industry is tourism.

The limited numbers of visitors are mainly birdwatchers. Apart from puffins there are razorbills, kittiwakes, oyster catchers, shags, guillemots, skylarks, wheateurs and, occasionally, rarer visitors.

The politics of art not really possible

It being a public holiday resterday, Labour thought it the day to present its policy on "leisure and the arts". It was made known that figures from the entertainment world would be on hand to assist the presentation.

Mr James Mortimer, the party secretary, led on to the platform, among others, Mr Melvin Bragg, Mr Colin Welland, Mr Neil Kinnock and Mr Roy Hattersley. After a surfeit of politicians, it was a called to bear an amorty timity. relief to have an opportunity to hear a writer and television performer who is broadly a Labour sympathizer but who has not misused his access to publicity slavishly to follow the pro-Labour line during this election. But sadly Mr Hattersley remained silent. Mr

Bragg did most of the talking. It was another example of the way in which the Labour campaign is being misman-aged. Here we had, on a Labour platform our foremost man of letters of provincial origin - an acute, sometimes melancholy observer of the melancholy observer of the life of the nothern proletariat. But Mr Mortimer never once asked Mr Hattersley to speak.

Instead, he allowed Mr Bragg to chatter at considerable length about subsidies, the arount of inhs provided.

the amount of jobs provided by the arts for such people as electricians, and the import-ance of having a theatre in the middle of Newcastle upon

Then Mr Bragg answered questions like the accomplished politico we know him to be. Mr Hattersley looked on enviously. He had been on several art pro-grammes before this one, including Mr Bragg's. Yester-day he had undoubtedly come prepared to read from his copious writings evoking his Yorkshire boyhood. We had a right to expect one of his warm and human passages about Sheffield Wednesday, wakes weeks, or black pud-

Instead, Mr Bragg kept on in the usual politician's way of noting any authority who might prop up his arguments to justify his claims. For instance, to prove that arts subsidies benefited the British economy as a whole, he quoted the opinion of someone apparently from the Arts Council - a Mr Field.

This Mr Field, according to Mr Bragg was "a very eminent accountant". We were at once alerted to the politician's old trick of making tained his silence.

ordinary trade sound π distinguished than the tra would warrant. You can ha a very eminent brain surged or a very eminent violinis You cannot have a ver eminent accountant.

Anyway, this no doubt estimable, but tedious-sound-ing ledger cler Mr Field, got his "very eminent" from Mr Bragg because he has worked it out that since it was first put on in 1956. Look Back in Anger has brought in £9m in royalties for Britain. Mr Bragg thought this triumphant proof of the need for more subsidies rather than merely proof of the need for more successful

With the other figure from the entertainment world also being reduced to silence - Mr Kinnock - it was now the turn of Mr Welland to talk. He was every bit as professional a northerner as Mr Hattersley. But he was blunt, tough and much less sensitive. Since Mr Denis Howell, the Labour spokesman on sport, was present, I took this Mr Welland to be a football manager.
"I would like to look at the therapeutic value of the arts", he said, which is the way that football managers talk now-adays. You can't beat, for therapy before a big match, giving the lads a reading from the latest Melvin Bragg, It sends them out ready to kick the other lot to death.

Later consultation of Who's Who confirmed my assumption, since Mr Welland listed himself as the author of Leeds United Eventually, A collea-gue explained that Leeds United had been a searing television programme about a strike by some female factory workers in Leeds. So this Mr Welland was not a football manager at all. On that Labour platform, he had been a complete imposter.

My indispensibly tenacious colleague Bevins inquired:
"Now that we have such a galaxy of stars could they tell us how many of them share Mr Hattersley's view that it would be not good for us to come out of the Common Market. Could they raise their

There was a terrible silence. Mr Foot shot Bevins a look of disinterested hatred. Then he referred him to the manifesto. Mr Hattersley, as befitted a man whose principle medium is the written word, main-

White South Africa celebrates Republic Day today to mark the foundation of the Republic in 1961. of the movement away from Britain which had been carried out by the National Party since it came to power in 1948. South Africa had enjoyed Dominion status since the Act of Union in 1910. Legislation is now passing through the all-white South African Parliament to give political representation to "coloureds" and Indians.

The papers

The Daily Mirror comments: The Tory Chairman, Mr Cecil Parkinson, accuses Mr Denis Healey of telling vicious untruths about what another Tory Govent-ment would do... Mr Parkinson's trouble is that he is a member of a Government which said it would not double VAT, but did. Which said it would not raise prescription charges, but did. Which said it would cut the burden of taxarion, be: didn't. Why should he now be believed when he says Mr Healey isn't telling the truth? The Washington Post yesterday described the Moscow Radio newscaster, Mr Vladimir Danchev, denouncing Soviet policy in Afgha-nistan, as a "journalist of courage".

When the news organizations give out their prizes for the year "we hope they reserve a choice one for Vladimir Danchev", the newspape said, "He's earned it." (C) TIMES NEWSPAPERS LIMITED, 1933.
